I have the Sony SW7600 shortwave receiver and an external antenna that I would like to connect. However, when I connect the antenna to the jack, the radio cuts out and very little sound is played. I can have a station on the internal and telescoping antenna, and when I plug in the external antenna, I lose the station. I have double checked the external antenna connector, and the wiring is good. The antenna is a random length dipole. Even local stations drop out. I opened the case, and tried to test the antenna jack. I am using a stereo male jack. When I connect the external antenna and use a continuity tester, the ground and second contacts have continuity to the circuit board, but the tip does not. Should the tip have continuity, and to what? I have the online repair manual, with circuit diagram and board diagram, but I am a novice at electronics. Thanks for the help in advance.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

```
the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider       |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup.  After a successful trial         |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this           |
change permanently.                                                           |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

as i understand it, the adhesive between the ribbon cable and the lcd itself and the cable and the pcb is contaminated and needs to be removed and replaced with a conductive adhesive as used in the ribbon cable repair in ipod touches

I will be trying this method soon, lining back up the cable i think will be the bigest task aside from removing the cable without damage.

And the post you replied to is from May 21, 2009.

WHoever posted is long gone by now. Don't reply to old messages, even if google buggishly allows it. They need to fix that.

If you want to discuss an issue, start a new thread, rather than resurrect an old one. Nobody knows what you are talking about (you didn't even quote the message you are replying to), and the only reason I know what's going on is because people replying to old posts via google is now an ongoing problem.

Changes followed by "|".

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

You have your pension fund, you have your brand, and you kill the

I've had that problem with Icom IC-706 and IC-7000 radios. The problem is that they are not able to operate with less than some critical voltage.

To start, you need to have the car's engine running to be sure battery voltage is 13.8 Volts. I assume you have a good connection to the battery and sufficiently heavy cables connecting the radio. If it is the same setup as you had before, it should still work.

That leaves the fuse connectors and the radio connector as possible sources of resistance. You can try using pliers to tighten the fuse clips by bending them slightly. If the radio power connector has been reconnected numerous times, its sockets may have become spread. You may be able to use a jeweler's screwdriver or a small blade on a pocket knife, to bend the socket sides inward. In either case, be careful not to overdo the bending.

In my installation, the problem first arose when I went to using Anderson Powerpole connectors with a Rig-Runner multiple outlet box to feed an additional rig. Each Powerpole connection introduced slightly more voltage drop, compared to wiring the radio directly to the battery.

In order to keep the Powerpole connectors in line, I purchased an MFJ-4416 "Super Battery Booster". It is a DC-to-DC switching power supply that takes a variable input voltage as low as 9 Volts, and produces a constant 13.8 VDC output at 25 Amps peak. (When it is turned off, the battery voltage is fed through to the output.)

If low voltage is your problem, using the MFJ-4416 would probably solve it. It also would solve a problem you may not be aware of. Output power of solid state transmitters is extremely sensitive to battery voltage. With a constant 13.8 volts, you always have full power.

Thanks a lot! The problem did turn out to be the fuse contacts. I made them a little tighter and problem solved!

Thanks

OC-

I'm glad to hear the problem is solved.

After I posted, it occurred to me that you might also have a blown fuse in the minus battery lead.  The radio might still have power through the antenna ground connection, but circuit resistance would be higher.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader
opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/
d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider       |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup.  After a successful trial         |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this           |
change permanently.                                                           |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

According to the rumor mill at radioreference.com GRE, the maker of Radio Shack scanners, has stopped making scanners. There is nothing official from GRE but they have fired most GRE US personnel and a ham radio seller has posted an article stating that GRE has stopped making scanners.

If it is true then Uniden will have a monopoly on the scanner market and prices will certainly rise.

The corporate site is still up, and I still see several GRE scanners selling here:

http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/scanners.html

Will Radio Shack confirm?

Hello.I'm new here and thought I'd throw this out there to see if anyone else has encountered this problem with the R71 radio.I recently took one of my R71s out of storage and the signal meter pegs to the right even when no antenn is hooked up.If I turn the preamp off it settles do about the middle of the scale.Someone told me it had to do with the voltage inverter going bad.This circuit is on the matrix board inside a metal can labled PS2.From what I understand a transistor gois bad inside this and has to be replaced.I opened the metal housing up and removed the small pcb inside.Supposedly the replacement transistor is a 2SD400.I went to the local electronics store(not-rip-me-off Shack) and they sold me a NTE382 transistor.Is this a proper replacement for it?I'm going to replace the electrolytic caps.in the circuit which may have caused the problem in the first placd.I'm going to recap the rest of the radio too once I get this straightened out.When I recap the radio,will this nessitate a realignment?Does anyone have a suggestion on where to send it for alignment?Thanks

Changes followed by "|".

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

Hi Ken
Quincy Rush here from Benson Az. Have a Sony CRF-150 that I am trying to disassemble. The string for the SW dial has broken. Wondering if you might shed some light on how to remove the case.

As a youth I spent 3 years in RAF South Ruislip and RAF Lakenheath. Jolly good time that was.

Cheers

Come on, pay attention. The post you replied to is from 2008, almost exactly four years ago.

The chances of him still reading the newsgroup is close to nil. Most have migrated elsewhere, but even at the best of times any given newsgroup had only a relative few staying over the long term. And the post was a hit and run, he thought this was a buy and sell newsgroup (it's actually for the discussion of amateur radio equipment) and if he stuck around, it was only long enough to see if anyone replied.

If you really need to ask a question, don't go digging for some ancient message via google, start a thread and ask the question.

Google has a bug that allows replies to messages older than 30 days. In the past they'd had such a limit, it disappeared for a short time when they "upgraded" the interface (thinking in terms of their own groups rather than usenet) and then when they "upgraded" the interface a few months hack, they forget to put a time limit on replies.

Blackhawks1-

I'm not familiar with that particular radio. I know that other similar receiver S-Meters will go upscale if the RF Gain Control is turned down. You might check to see if turning that control fully clockwise will correct the S-Meter problem.

Before replacing the transistor, I'd check the existing one with an Ohm meter. Many digital multimeters have a diode scale. The meter will measure conduction of a diode in one direction but not the other. A transistor acts like two diodes connected together at the Base. You would check the Base-Collector junction and the Base-Emitter junction to see if either is shorted or open in both directions.

Hi folks.  I just past the first basic HAM radio test.  I was looking at getting a hand held radio that I can keep in my car or in my backpack for use in am emergency, like the 2003 Northeast Blackout.
The problem is, there must be a billion choices out there!
I'm not rich, and I'm not on food stamps either.  I'm willing to spend a pretty decent amount for a product that's worth it.
I'm in the US.

I used the 2003 Blackout as an example, because I was lucky enough to be in NYC when that happened.  I was stranded with somebody who had a hand held radio, he used a repeater and was able to have his friend (with power) on the other end call people and say they were OK.  I thought that was pretty awesome.
I used to have a pair of Maxon GMRS-210's but I sold them on eBay many moons ago.

Which is the document that I have continually referered to on here many time, but no one listens ;-)

Specifically -

Converted radio equipment

If modifications are made to the equipment, such as adding an antenna connector, the overall maximum ERP or other technical parameters must not exceed the permitted levels set out in the Interface Requirement.

Problem solved.

If he was in the rightr then he was in the right.

Holiday insurance should cover that and I'd be seeking legal redress from the Greeks if there are any avenues to pursue.

As I've always preached - take no st from anyone especially when you have right on your side.

I've only glanced through it, but I get the distinct impression that there is a tacit acceptance that the original 'only built-in aerial' rule is being broken.

It's good advice for him to remember when he is serving his 5 month jail sentence for refusing to turn over his log files, because he refused to give them a laptop which had nothing to do with his radio operation.

You made the mistake of saying it was a mobile phone. You should have

Why don't you query the various Chinese manufacturers that make HTs?

Tell them if it is possible to purchase these HTs in China and use them in China

Yes maybe you cannot import anything but buying them may be something too

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader
opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/
d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider       |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup.  After a successful trial         |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this           |
change permanently.                                                           |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and
news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either
"radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including
uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved
is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved.  We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to
rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

If you can not get streaming audio from the web http://allindiaradio.gov.in/

I would suggest that you install a good outdoor antenna to try to improve reception or purchase an amplified antenna.. I think that that radio has an external antenna jack.

Check out a store like Universal Radio on the internet.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

radio/personal-intro
Subject: Guide to the rec.radio Newsgroups
Maintainer: jeffreyh@Hawaii.Edu (Jeffrey Herman)
Last Posted: 9 Nov 2001 06:18:17 GMT
Posting-Frequency: 15th of each month

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

rec.radio.amateur.antenna |
rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors |
rec.radio.amateur.dx |
rec.radio.amateur.equipment |
rec.radio.amateur.homebrew |
rec.radio.amateur.moderated |
rec.radio.amateur.space |

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

For more information about our newsgroup, see:

http://www.panix.com/~rram/usenet/rri/index.html

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-info-request@panix.com.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.swap (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/swap-guide/):

 radio/swap-guide
 Subject: Rec.radio.swap FAQ: A Guide to Buying and Selling on Usenet
 Maintainer: jeffreyh@Hawaii.Edu (Jeffrey Herman)
 Last Posted: 6 Nov 2001 19:25:51 GMT
 Posting-Frequency: Monthly

For more information about our newsgroup, see:

http://www.panix.com/~rram/usenet/rri/index.html

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-info-request@panix.com.

I am interested in the 70 MHz band that is currently authorized in some European countries.  I understand the frequency is no longer used by the U.S. television system, so it could be authorized here in the future as well.

According to an article on how to modify the Kenwood TM-742, the 50 MHz module can tune to about 90 MHz.  Is anyone actually using one on the 70 MHz band?  Is it necessary to realign the module, or does it work as-is?

Not quite true.  There is a full-power DTV station in Illinois (WHBF - FCC Facility ID #13950) and a Class-A digital (also in Illinois) WOCK-CD (Fac ID #35092).

There are also a handful of LP stations around the country on VHF Channel 4 - some in analog (who will be facing the 2015 LP shutdown) and some as LP digital.

Changes followed by "|".

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

One doesn't mean the other. One reason the 11metre band disappeared to CB was because it wasn't an international allocation. Same with 220Mhz, even 144MHz, only some of it's an international allocation.

Yes, some work has been done to internationalize things, but that tends to be to give some specific change, like in the low frequency allocations. That gives a whole different propagation situation.

So just because there's a 70MHz allocation somewhere doesn't mean it will come to North America. And for that matter, just because a frequency range may become available doens't mean it will go to amateur radio.

Note that history shows we've lost more vhf/uhf allocations over time than HF allocations, indeed, we've gained some in HF.

Michael-

I don't know all the legalities, but NK1G's comments are probably the main reason it will not happen any time soon. I was not aware that there were still Television stations using the frequency.

In the meantime, I would like to listen to see if I can hear the Europeans during band openings. I could construct a converter, but it would be easier if the TM-742's 50 MHz module worked there. I guess I'll have to try it to find out.

It just occurred to me that not all 70 MHz activity would be on FM, as is the case on the 50 MHz band. Perhaps a converter isn't such a bad idea!

Hi Fred

There are increasing numbers of countries in Europe and the Middle east getting allocations on 4M, its worth looking at www.70Mhz.org for some up to date info.
However you are unlikely to hear trans Atlantic traffic on FM, you would be a lot better off building a converter. There have been a few cross band QSO's between the US and EU using 50 / 70MHz. You have probably missed the season now though. Have a look for CT1FFU on you tube..

Good Luck

Thanks for the 70 MHz website.  The article about modifying a TenTec transverter looks interesting.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

```
the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider       |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup.  After a successful trial         |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this           |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

I realize this post is 14 years old.  Did you ever sell the HD-1418?

So why would you expect someone to still be here after fourteen years?

Since people have always believed this was a buy and sell newsgroup, it isn't, there's massive turnover since most posts are hit and run. But even among regulars, there can't be many of us from back then who still check this newsgroup. And those are likely to be the ones who actually participate(d) in discussion here, not the advertisers.

And why does it matter? Even if the guy is still reading the newsgroup, why would you care whether he sold it or not? If he didn't, it was likely tossed long ago.

All you idots replying to old messages, why don't you just find the original poster and email them if you really so badly have to ask about an old message?

JUNK

It is ok if you work Public Service and have a use for it.

But it is no good for anything else.....

AND - if it requires propetiary software to operate and program - it will cost you more in the long run to buy it then to buy new....

Changes followed by "|".

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article       |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since      |
it was written, including:                                                    |

 rec.radio.amateur.antenna                                                    |
 rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors                                                |
 rec.radio.amateur.dx                                                         |

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

That's my boy Jack Wesolowski, a 68-year old, mentally-ill , retired SSD worker, foul-mouthed bigot, racist, liar, spammer and troll who has been spamming the UseNet as Gary Sokolisch since January of 2011.

A recent ode to psychopath Jack Wesolowski, from rec.sport.boxing

http://tinyurl.com/7ldhq3b

"Way Back Jack, his mother licks my crack,
Then she sucks my dick until it's yellah.
An' his mother-fuckin' fathah doesn't so much as bother
To use some spittle when he's bung-holin' little Boys, before they're rollin' in the shower, their 'nads all a' swollen,
While our perverted faggot Jack laps up all their bloody turds.
He's a real low-life fellah, whose perversion escapes mere words

And one from alt.native, May 4, 2002.

Brother Jack is a racist bigot
His mouth is a toxic old spigot
He spews out his hate
He never can wait
To find some more dolts who will dig it!

We know a white jerk named Jack
Who really wants to be black
He calls himself "brother"
Wears clothes from his mother(*)
The truth is he's just a hack

We see his rantings as racist bile
His words typically ugly and vile
The master of hate
Thank God he won't mate
Let us leave him alone for awhile

Changes followed by "|".

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.swap (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/swap-guide/):

radio/swap-guide
Subject: Rec.radio.swap FAQ: A Guide to Buying and Selling on Usenet
Maintainer: jeffreyh@Hawaii.Edu (Jeffrey Herman)
Last Posted: 6 Nov 2001 19:25:51 GMT
Posting-Frequency: Monthly

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

For more information about our newsgroup, see:

http://www.panix.com/~rram/usenet/rri/index.html

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-info-request@panix.com.

Changes followed by "|".

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

The video you will see on this web site is horrifying. The crimes committed against law-abiding gun owners are beyond comprehension. The arrogance of anti-gun politicians and government officials and their hate of freedom will churn your stomach.

The law is the law, the Constitution is the Constitution. If ONE local mayor or police chief can decide what the Second Amendment means, it opens the door to tyranny�where ANY mayor or police chief can say what the Second Amendment means.

You've seen this brand of abuse of freedom in the history books�in the pages about days of gun confiscations leading to the terror of Stalin, Mao and Hitler. But you'd never in a million years think it could happen in America.

Well, it can and it did. And it will happen again unless we take action today.

New Orleans Mayor Ray Nagin, Police Superintendent P. Eddie Compass unleashed a wave of confiscations with these chilling words:

"No one will be able to be armed. We will take all weapons. Only law enforcement will be allowed to have guns."

Thousands of firearms were then confiscated from law-abiding gun owners. The police gave no paperwork or receipts for those guns. They just stormed in and seized them.

With your help we're going to make the first time in New Orleans the LAST time in America. Thank you!

Now, one year later, these crimes against gun owners have snowballed into a far greater threat to our freedoms.

Even though NRA secured a court order demanding their immediate and unconditional return, almost every single confiscated firearm remains locked in government trailers.

With the stroke of a pen, Mayor Nagin and Police Superintendent Compass are getting away with "murder"�a savaging of the second, fourth and fourteenth amendments of our Constitution. And they have put America on notice that they're going to keep seizing lawfully owned guns under any pretense.

New Orleans gun owners are showing up at these trailers, with serial numbers of their firearms, expecting Mayor Nagin and his band of anti-gunners to respect the Federal courts.

They are met by stony-eyed bureaucrats who say serial numbers aren't enough�and that gun owners now need PROOF OF PURCHASE of these firearms.

How many of those gun owners do you think had original receipts for those firearms? And even if they did, how many do you think could find those receipts in the wreckage of a hurricane?

Many of these firearms were passed down from father to son, generation to generation. Some are precious heirlooms. Some are collector's pieces won in our wars. And they were all lawfully owned and they must be returned to their owners.

With your help we're going to make the first time in New Orleans the LAST time in America. Thank you!

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

rec.radio.amateur.antenna |
rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors |
rec.radio.amateur.dx |
rec.radio.amateur.equipment |
rec.radio.amateur.homebrew |
rec.radio.amateur.moderated |
rec.radio.amateur.space |

article ourselves.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to
rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

radio/personal-intro
Subject: Guide to the rec.radio Newsgroups
Maintainer: jeffreyh@Hawaii.Edu (Jeffrey Herman)
Last Posted: 9 Nov 2001 06:18:17 GMT
Posting-Frequency: 15th of each month

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

rec.radio.amateur.antenna |
rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors |
rec.radio.amateur.dx |
rec.radio.amateur.equipment |
rec.radio.amateur.homebrew |
rec.radio.amateur.moderated |
rec.radio.amateur.space |

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

For more information about our newsgroup, see:

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to

Changes followed by "|".

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

Does anyone have recent experience with the old HA-201 walkie talkie amplifiers? They use electronic transmit/receive switching. They are rated for 8 Watts out for 1 Watt in, and 10 Watts out for 1 1/2 Watts in, using a 13.6 Volt power supply. Maximum drive is 3 Watts. The amplifier uses a single 2N5590 transistor.

Back in the 70s, I built an HA-201 and worked on at least one other. I can not remember much about them, except it was impossible to stabilize them per Heath's instructions and technical notes. I found a "fix", but don't recall from where.

At a recent Hamfest, I obtained a couple more of these amplifiers. They both tuned up per instructions, but at a slightly low output power and with the instability as noted on an AM radio. Adding the stability "fix", the power output was still the same.

Since both units seem to perform the same, I wonder if the design is just not able to put out rated power from rated input? I used a Kenwood Handheld as a source with 20 feet of RG-58 to knock the power down to 3 Watts. For 3 Watts input, they both put out 11 Watts. Using a different Handheld with 2 Watts output, they put out about 8 Watts.

If anyone is interested in the stability "fix", it involves using a tantalum electrolytic capacitor (low ESR) in parallel with the 100 UF, and a 330 Ohm 1 Watt resistor in parallel with the RF Choke.

That was Saturday. Today the "fix" is not working! The only difference in my setup was the power supply.

I wanted to see if tuning an amplifier with less drive, might result in more power when drive was increased. I tried 2 Watts, and then 0.3 Watts drive. In all cases, the instability shows up as garbage on the nearby AM radio. The garbage comes and goes as tuning is adjusted. When tuned with 0.3 Watts, output was the same when changing to the 2 Watt source. I think the amplifier is acting as an oscillator being excited by the drive.

One difference between this "fix" and the one from the 70s, was before the 100 UF capacitor had been replaced by three 22UF tantalum capacitors in parallel. The current version only has one 22 UF tantalum capacitor in parallel with the 100 UF. This may explain the motor-boating sound of the interference.

My amplifiers oscillate but my oscillators don't!

I found the source of my "fix". It was in a QST "Hints and Kinks" article by Ron Baxley, N4GB, probably from the early 80s.

I've tried everything I can think of. It appears that a resistor in parallel with the RF Choke makes NO difference, except the resistor gets hot! A resistor across the input, suggested by Heath bulletin HA-201-2, also makes no difference except for a slight reduction in power. These two resistors may make a difference for a different transistor. The two I'm working on use a 2N5590, while some kits came with a CTC B12-12.

I removed the C9 100 uF capacitor, and replaced it with a couple more Tantalum capacitors to agree with the QST article. As far as I can tell, this makes an improvement but not a cure.

The closest thing to a cure seems to be a revised procedure for tuning the compression capacitors. Initial settings for capacitors involves snugging them down and backing each off a specific fraction of a turn. Tuning then involves adjusting C1 through C5 in sequence, for maximum output. From the initial settings, peaking C1 involves opening the capacitor another half turn or so, and gives rise to the oscillation.

My revision was to NOT adjust C1 until after C2 through C5 have been adjusted. Going through the sequence a second time starting with C1, I found that all were close to their peak, and the oscillation was not present.

Listening on a nearby AM radio, the "garbage" previously noted is not there. But wait! I let the HA-201 cool down, and now there is a "rip" sound in the AM radio when the handheld is keyed. After a few seconds, there is no longer a "rip" when the handheld is keyed, after something has heated up. The only thing I can think of that would cool off and heat up so quickly, are the 1N4149 diodes used for electronic switching.

Heath discontinued the HA-201 and brought out the HA-201A in the late 70s. It was a major revision that uses PIN diodes for switching.

The best thing you can do with that amplifier is throw it away.

Why waste your time and money on junk.

BUY yourself a transceiver and forget about walkie talkies...

Walkie talkies has a couple of purposes.

If you are at a hamfest, you can use it to communicate between club members

If you are working a civic event, you can use it to communicate

If you get a flat tire, you can stick it under another tire to keep your vehicle from rolling away.

Walkie talkies are the last radio you should buy, not the first...

People confuse amateur radio with cell phones..

They want something where it is small and doesn't cost much and they can squawk on the one or two local repeaters with no investment of time, money or knowledge..   You don't need to know anything about antenna's, feed lines or sWR, all you have to do is squawk....

Changes followed by "|".

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

I recently bought a used Mazda B2500 pick-up truck.

The factory sound system had a quadraphonic sound system option.
Apparently the truck only had a stereo sound system installed, no speakers were ever installed in the two speaker ports on the rear wall of the cab.

The two speaker ports near the floor on the rear wall of the cab will hold 5"x8" or 6"x9" oval speakers.

I am going to install a Dual Band, Dual Receive 2m/440 transceiver (Icom tm-v71A or Anytone AT5888UV).

I would like to put speakers in the empty speaker ports, and dedicate the one speaker to left audio channel, and one to the right audio channel.

I have looked for speakers that will fit these speaker ports; but all I find are "high performance" audiophile music speakers that have audio responses like "50Hz to 44000Hz".
This is way overkill for my application.

What I need are speakers that are tailored to Voice frequencies; say 300Hz to 5000Hz, that will fit into the speaker ports.

A strong roll-off below 300HZ will help suppress hum from CTCSS.

Does anyone have an idea where I can purchase speakers with these specs?

I am looking for Recommendations of specific makes, models and vendor URLs.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

rec.radio.amateur.antenna |
rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors |
rec.radio.amateur.dx |
rec.radio.amateur.equipment |
rec.radio.amateur.homebrew |
rec.radio.amateur.moderated |
rec.radio.amateur.space |

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

Considering the government was giving away coupons and most people got the boxes for free, and indoor antenna's don't always work, you would be better off giving them to GoodWill and letting them make a couple of bucks off them.

The problem with DTV converter boxes is - you can't browse other channels or look at the program guide for other channels while watching another channel.

Channel Master CM 7000 and Zenith DTV boxes were the best performing - the rest were pretty much garbage when it came to performance.
I tried them all....

This isn't a forsale newsgroup, never was. It's intended for the discussion of amateur radio equipment.

You've failed in two aspects, thinking it's acceptable to post an ad here, and then thinking it's okay to post non-ham equipment here.

I can't believe how many clueless people there are out there, who think it's perfectly acceptable to post ads here, yet don't even do anything to actually provide content to the newsgroup, so there are readers who would see the ads. Not that posting on topic would justify your ads, but there are endless places to advertise that are far better venues than this newsgroup. The simplest would be your local classified ads in your local newspaper, or since you're cheap, the local Craigslist. This is local type junk, it's not like that TMC GPR-90 I got last August at a garage sale for $20 because the sellers wanted to get rid of it and there was a limited pool of locals who'd be interesteed. It doesn't deserve a world wide audience.

Tim,
I'm now looking for the same, but could really use, perhaps mostly, the info. on calibration as I may have fixed the remote sensor/coupler, but now need to know details on calibration, esp. probable adj. cap (pot?)location, etc. I'll also try your email from qrz or somewhere for contact if possible. Thanks

You replied to a message from 2003, the date even shows up in your quoting, which is 10 years ago, almost to the day.

Do you really think Tim is still reading this newsgroup?  He may not even have the thing anymore, a lot can happen in a decade.

If you want something, then just start a thread.  Don't use google's bug to reply to threads older than 30 days, you're just dredging up the past and confusing people who haven't yet figured out that idiots are replying to old messages.  Google is merely an archive of usenet, they are making a mess of usenet but don't think the rest of us like it.

Michael please,
Usually I am the one to come off sounding like a jerk..
The magic of the internet is that you can do a search and can find the most likely results.

I believe that the story is that the new poster is asking for similar advice.

IN the service repair buisness, we often times find that we cannot find a manual.
About the best you can do is connect it to a dummy load and calibrate it or connect it to a antenna analyzer and calibrate it.

The biggest problem with the Radio crap - oops I mean shack stuff was that it was not very high quality. It appeased the cheap ham and cbr which made it affordable but not very reliable.

I'm looking for a new simple to program & operate 2 meter only ht & mobile rig. I'm tired of rigs with fancy bells & whistles, difficult menus, etc. I do not want to carry an operator's manual with me all the time. Anything out there where an engineering degree is not required?

Welcome to the forum.
Alinco / ADI - were both WYSWYG type transceivers.
They had a button to access the VFO which allowed you to tune to a specific frequency. You then picked out a PL - if any, and the split, which is + above 147.000 and - below 147.000
You then pressed the VFO button again, selected a channel and hit enter and it was saved.

That is about as easy as they come.

At the same time, the next generation of transceivers, the Kenwood 2 meter transceivers wern't much harder to program.

The purpose of the menu's is to allow each button to do more then one thing.
As in the case of my Yaesu FT 8900R, it does 4 bands simultaniously.
On the left side it does two meters, 70 cm and also 6 meters, on the right side it does 2 meters, seventy cm and also 10 meters.
The center button - I painted white, because it accesses the menu and looks like all the others.
One button accesses the VFO, while another selects bands, while another selects options such as allowing it to clone or to program from a computer, while another allows it to download.
Things like Packet, wires etc - might not interest you today, but might be something you might get into down the road, and would want one of those more complicated radios... Just something for you to think about..

Different radios does different things, and if you might work Ecomm - you want to have a dual band transceiver.

At the same time, walkie talkies have come a long way since my Radio

Shack HTX 202 - which is almost impossible to program, unless you have done it before, or have a manual with you and can decypher it's contents while you program the radio.

The new walkie talkies - forget it.
About the best you can do is laminate a card and attach it to the radio, with programming instructions.
Other then Ecomm work, a walkie talkie is practically worthless from the standpoint of trying to work simplex, which is how most Ecomm work should be expected to be performed.

Alinco DR 135 TMK III
Alinco DR 635 T
Icom 2300H

Yaesu FT 1900 / FT 2900R are going to be two of the easiest mobiles to program.

I don't know of any walkie talkies of your specifications...

You might want to look for an Elmer, someone to guide you and show you how to properly operate those transceivers and show you how to program them.

I would suggest that you buy a Yaesu FT 8800 or 8900 and a programming cable and a G4HFQ software and move up - due to the fact that the 8800 and 8900 does a lot more things for a little more money.
The programming software allows you to store thousands of programs in your computer, which you write, specifically and can store in your transceiver, which you can access while you are driving down the road.

Say you lived in Western Pennsylvania.
You could write one program for Pittsburgh
Another program for Erie
Another program for central PA
Another program for northern PA
Another program for central Ohio
Another program for Maryland / WV
Another program for eastern PA...

Then, while you were driving down the road, you could access one of these other programs, and the radio will switch and the frequencies will stay the same, but the PLs will change and you can choose between a number or a 5 letter trundication - PITT - Pittsburgh, KITT - Kittanning, Derry - Derry, Indna - Indiana etc..   Or can be frequency - Pitt would be 146.790, Kitt would be 145.410, Derry - would be 145.150

The names allows you to get used to hearing the tones and the CW identifier, which learns you the channel, then when you switch to frequency, you will recognize it by the sound of the repeater.
If you get somewhere in between, you can press the center button and change the PL. If you want to save it, you can save it, if you want to go back to scan, it will revert back to the origionally programmed PL.

If you want to know what station a frequency is, you can press the button and it will show the name, and you can save it or go back to scan and it will go back to the frequency.   That is the nice thing about the Yaesu - you don't have to know a lot once you learn the basic menu.

Get a Motorola HT-220, like someone suggested the last time this came up.

Squelch and VOlume controls (the on/off is on one of them) and if it's a multichannel unit, then a switch to change channels. No bells and whistles, if you need different frequencies, you open it up, get new crystals and plug them in. Technology this over forty years old, it can't be beat in terms of simplicity.

Of course, expensive to add new frequencies, and it won't cover all the locally used channels.

Endless ham specific 2meter FM walkie talkies followed, their quality varying, some apparently awful in the receiver department. But they were just as simple, though often had place for more frequencies (but needed 2 crystals per channel). Some even ran off standard AA batteries.

Towards the end of the seventies, synthesiders did become standard, but no scanning and no bells and whistles. Little BCD switches to change the frequency, no LED or LCD readout.

After that, bells and whistles became the norm, people living with bad receivers to they could have wideband reception, endless features added to be able to top the competition, rather than because the buyers were demanding it.

I think I would look at a Wouxun KG-UVD1P. This is a dual band Ht and can be bought for around $ 110 to $ 125 depending on where and what extras you get. Be sure to get the programming cable with it. While you can program them without the cable, it is worth the extra couple of bucks. Softwear for it is free.

I have one and several others in the club have them. Be sure to get one from a dealer in the US and not order from China off ebay. There is nothing wrong with this, except if you do get a bad one, it is just easier to deal with locally.

Here is an ebay number for one to look at.

I know nothing about this dealer,but it seems he is in China where the radios are made.

There are a couple of others with a number of 2 or 3 in it that seem to be the same radio in a differant case.

There is another company that makes one about like it for around $ 50 called Baofeng. I do not know anything about that brand.

Ordering from China... I know stuff comes from there anyway, but the last time I had a problem the Chinaman ignored me and there was nothing
I could do.
I'd rather order from a US distributor.

What about Kenwood?

Kenwood is fine. Here is a place in the US that has the ones I was talking about.

http://www.wouxun.us/category.php?category_id=46

I am thinking the programming cable for the Kenwood and this one are the same. I wouldn't doubt if many of the HTs are made in China.

I am waiting on one of the dealers over here to start inporting some of the dual band mobile rigs that I am seeing on ebay that are in China now.

Changes followed by "|".

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

A handheld transceiver should be the last thing you should buy, not the first.

A handheld transceiver is only good for a couple of things..

If you get a flat tire - you can stick it under the tire and use it to keep the car from rolling away.

If you need to kill a small animal for food, you can throw it at it.

The first thing you need to realize is that in order to be a effective communicator, you need to operate frequently - not just when there is an emergency.

It is not like talking on the telephone.
There is a certain lingo you need to learn and certain things you need to learn to do.

If you wait until there is an emergency - most times you will find that when you need it, you will usually find that the batteries are dead and the repeaters you thought that you would be able to hit - might not even work.

Buy yourself a mobile transceiver and mount it in your automobile and buy the best mobile antenna you can afford..
My choice is the Larsen NMO 2/70

Buy yourself a power supply and a good piece of coax - LMR 400 or Belden 9913 and a good antenna - Diamond X 510 would be my choice and use it often.

Technician class license is not a stopping point, but a starting point.
Keep studying and get yourself a General or better class license.

How about attending some of the meetings of the club that gave you your ham (not "HAM," btw) test and talking to members about their HTs?

Check the website of that club, your local ARRL section, or the main ARRL website (http://www.arrl.org/hamfests-and-conventions-calendar) for upcoming hamfests where a variety of units might be for sale and you can find out more about your options.

Unfortunately, the Ham Radio Outlet website doesn't have product reviews, but I found this site that does:

http://www.eham.net/reviews/products/49

I hope you plan to use it more than just for a once-a-decade emergency!
If you get on the air frequently, you'll know what repeaters are available in your area, whom you can talk to simplex if the repeaters go down, etc.

Good luck!

I'd suggest that you make contact with your city/county ARES organization, as they are likely to be the people most familiar with "ham radio during local emergencies" issues.

They could probably provide you with some advice as to which HTs have and have not worked out well for their members - reliable, easy to use, easy to program, and having the features and bands needed for communication in your area.

They can also probably help you with additional learning, about how to communicate effectively during an emergency. There's a lot more to it than "grab the radio, tune to a channel, hit PTT, and yell for help".

In my area (about 45 minutes south of SF), we teach a couple of classes fairly regularly. One is an "OK, I passed the test and got my license... now what do I do?" class for new hams - it's intended to give first-level experience with HT programming, proper protocol and etiquette when using simplex and repeater communications, that sort of thing... how to get on the air effectively.

The next is a "fundamentals of emergency communications" training. It's an initial training for people interested in organized emergency communication support (ARES/RACES, Red Cross, etc.) and is useful for anyone concerned about how to use ham radio (or similar, such as GMRS and neighborhood FRS for CERT) in an emergency or disaster.

Your community (ARES or ham-club) may have something similar.

I have done a hub-page about JFET regenerative receivers:
http://litetec.hubpages.com/hub/JFET-Regenerative-Radio-Receiver
I have also posted a good amount of information on "The radio board" about regenerative receivers recently.
I hope that is useful information for someone.

Come on, pay attention.

You replied to a thread that started in 2003, then someone with a long retention time replied in 2006 and now you reply 6 years later.

Yet all you can say is an idiotic "yup"?

You can't even quote the message you are replying to so there is some context?

Once again, just because google has a bug that allows replies to messages older than 30 days is not a reason to reply. Except that idiots keep doing it, the rest of us would have no idea what you are talking about. But since it's an ongoing problem, every time I see a reply to a message I don't remember, it's clearly from google, and likely years old.

If you don't ahve anything significant to say, don't post. If you have something significan to say, then say it by posting a new message in a new thread.

If you really felt a need to reply, you should have done that months ago, when the thread you started was actually active. It's people like you who have made the newsgroup dead, people who can't be bothered to stick around.

Do digital receivers get discussed here much? I am working on a receiver for the WWVB signal at 60 kHz and am looking at a very low power all digital design in an FPGA. Of course some aspects are still analog such as the antenna. I have been reading about loop antennas for low frequency work. I don't plan on having an analog amplifier unless it is needed. I may be able to sample the RF signal directly and use processing to boost the signal out of the noise.

Has anyone done anything like this? Right now I am looking at how to synchronize the sample rate with the carrier so that I can accumulate the signal in a coherent manner.

Any pointers on where I could find more info?

UNUSUAL MINT D-104 MIC SHELL with TWO SWITCH-SELECTABLE HEIL HC-4 AND HC-5 MIC ELEMENTS. It is in Original Astatic box and comes with mating Astatic STAND ADAPTER (stand is NOT included) plus several feet of shielded audio cable. Stripped cable with NO mic connector. There is a mini toggle switch (at lower left area of mic head) that selects EITHER Heil HC-4 or HC-5 element.

These elements sold for $45. each (and up) before Bob Heil stopped selling them. If you own a Heil mic and even if you don't, you know that these things are as rare as hens teeth. You just can't find them any more. These are not the cheap knockoffs advertised on eBay. They are two genuine OEM Heil elements. What you see here is what you get - and it looks (and sounds) very good!!

$169. Including Shipping w/Delivery Confirmation INSTANT PAYPAL REQUIRED

Original Astatic Crystal or Ceramic element is NOT included.
This D-104 Shell contains ONLY switch-selectable Heil Elements HC-4 AND HC-5, as noted.

Thanks,

Hi, Rick,

Sorry, I can't help much, I am an analog guy, myself, and pretty much of a rookie at that. BUT, I do have a couple of inexpensive "weather stations" that I believe get their clock synch signals from WWVB. I've never looked for or seen schematics for their innards', but have to guess they have some sort of receiver on an IC.

You've probably chased down this road already, but just in case you haven't, what do you think?

They certainly don't have much of an antenna system that befits a 60 khz (kcs, actually), and only seem to be able to synch here in the dead of night when most of us are sleeping, and most of the noisiest devices are either off or at least on standby.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.swap (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/swap-guide/):

Hi Chief,

Yes, there is at least one company that makes these chips. They are a conventional superhet receiver designed to work with a tuned ferrite antenna. The one I have seen even has several outputs to allow selection of tuning capacitors so the chip can receive a number of different signals other than just the WWVB timecode.

This is a nice device, but I am attempting to show the low power potential of an FPGA and the power of digital signal processing in this application. I am hoping to show that I can pull the signal out of the noise better than a conventional receiver while using less power.

My understanding of the signal processing is actually my strong suit for this project. I have been reading up on antenna design for LF signals and I think a tuned loop antenna will give me a stronger signal than the tuned ferrite coil. The ferrite coil has to be used with a front end amplifier which I hope to omit. We'll see!

I have a simulation of the ADC working well and will be adding the DCO to synchronize the sample rate to the carrier. I should have an eval board next week (gratis of Lattice Semi, they're great folks!) and will be working on the antenna.

The antenna design is my weak area and I will be learning a lot there.

Rick

That's a misdirection. Most of those "atomic clocks" will only try to sync up early in the morning, it's not like they are trying all day long. Once a day is good enough, the time can't go astray in one day, and it makes sense if they are doing it only once a day to do it in those early hours when a lot less junk is out there.

Most can be told to resync by the press of a button, I find it varies whether they can get a signal during the daytime or not, though it's not something I try much since virtually every night they do sync up.

My Casio Waveceptor watch is different. Not only will it work with stations other than WWVB (well if you're in England or Europe, or Japan), but it checks for an update at midnight local time. If it gets the signal, it stops checking for the day, if it doesn't then it keeps checking every hour till I don't know when. I've had it two years and every so often it misses a sync, but except for early on when I didn't orient it properly, I think the only times it hasn't sync'd up was when I still had it on my wrist until way too late, or I did't put it back in the right place. If it misses at midnight, it generally gets it by 3am at the latest.

And it has a much smaller antenna than the wall clocks. The wall clocks must have larger antennas (I've looked inside one) but they require proper orientation to get the WWVB signal here.

it is interesting that any WWVB receiver in the ham or hobby magazines over the years have used a large loop.

Are you sure they are superhets? When those clocks have come up before, people have talked about 60KHz crystals as filters, and down there you wouldn't need to shift to another frequency for selectivity, while you really would want to keep out junk before there is much amplification.

Every construction article about WWVB receivers I've seen over the decades starts with a large loop and then amplifies the signal at 60KHz. The design needs is different from a general VLF receiver since you only need the one frequency. Amplifying at that frequency isn't difficult, keeping junk out would be.

Very interesting, Michael. I hadn't thought of my WX machines checking at a predetermined schedule. That helps explain (to thickheaded me) why they won't sync when I go thorough the messy set-up algorithm after changing batteries, but have usually sync'd by the time the cock crows.

I notice Rick has slid over to the slightly more appropriate rec.radio.homebrew slot with his interesting quest.

How many years have I been reading your contributions here, Michael?

No, I'm not sure they are superhets, I don't recall the block diagram at the moment. I suppose you are right that they just need to filter out the junk (done mostly by the antenna) and get a signal that is above the noise to measure the amplitude.

I could use an amplifier, but I'm trying to minimize the power consumption and I think I can do it without the amp through averaging.

I have an old HP 5245L freq counter with plug in 5255A converter module that I bought long ago and never got around to testing. The converter module is not working, but the freq counter itself is working with the main input, but works a bit using the aux in port, so it sounds like it could be a bad input attenuator, mixer or maybe the 200 MHz oscillator stuff is not working. I have a copy of the manual and it talks about working on the cards with extender card while the unit is installed in the counter. Problem is, there's a metal "casting" all around that the converter slides into. How does one remove the top cover of the module and insert extender cards with the case compartment in the way?

Sure would be nice to have freq counting capability up to 12 GHz!

To introduce myself - I have been involved in communications since 1970 and I have been a volunteer examiner for 1.5 years.

At the very basic level - we have been giving one test session per a month for the last 18 months.

Most every test session with the exception of Ham In A Day classes - the only participants are the people that I enticed to come along and take the exam.

I even went so far as to have the first VE test session in my county in 25 years!

Two people showed up and one person passed the exam...

I thought about what I could do to make ham radio more user friendly.
I came to the conclusion that I could round up as many ham radio magazines as I could find.
I contacted the local vendors of ham radio equipment - HRO and AES and I got them to send me a case of catalog's.
I then circled the best transceivers, antenna's, coax, power supplies, SWR meters etc and I handed them out.
I also gave the surplus catalogs away to the other VE's so they could give them out at future events.

The Key to Amateur Radio is to have a Elmer!
You say - what is a Elmer?
A Elmer is a experienced HAM - a person who operates every day and is willing to open their shack to anyone that wishes to use their equipment to get on the air.
A ELMER is a person that is willing to LEND you equipment - short term, so you can get on the air and make some contacts!

Note I said short term!
Some people - once they get something that works - even just a little, will stop - because they dont want to spend their own money!
Those people are not HAMS!

As a example - the one person who passed the test at my VE test session, had a transceiver that was given to him when he worked for the Forrest Fire Service in Colorado.
He felt that since he had a mobile radio and antenna - he didn't need anything else, because it was programmable into the 2 meters / 70 CM bands.

Only when he took the test - it was 65* outside, and when he got his license it was only 55*.
Now it is only 35* and operating outside is out of the question...

So he got one of his forest fire friends to send him a power supply,

FREE - all he had to do is pay the $18.00 shipping..
He actually complained because he had to pay $18.00 for a 20 amp power supply..
At that point, I washed my hands of the guy - because he won't ever make it in my world...

Yes you can make a couple of contacts with a cheap - $50.00 walkie talkie, but NO - it is not a reliable form of communications...

The only exception to the rule is a old Radio Shack HTX 202 that I bought at my ELMERS SK auction.. It was broke, no manual, the battery was dead.
No one wanted it when it did not work!
I bought a battery pack and I made a mobile power cord and I was given a mobile handheld MFJ magmount antenna to use.
For 6 watts - it does remarkably well in certain conditions.

I have been able to hit repeaters 40 miles away - that are in a good place, as long as I am in a good place.. No one is going to drive 12 miles to the top of my mountain to operate on 2 meters...
So yes it can work - as long as you are in a good situation..

The problem is - I live in the mountains and If I drive down the road 1/4 of 1 mile, the signals all drops out and I have spotty coverage while mobile.

The other problem is - most people I know that are old hams - do not know how to program their own radios.
The exception is the ones with the Alinco's and ADI's because they were so simplistic - all you had to do was program it from the VFO and add the PL and Split and there you have it.

Try to do the same thing with my Kenwood TS 590S on 10 or 6 meters and you will see the difference immediately..
Those same people - who usually doesn't even know how to operate simplex - unless someone programmed it in for them, are perplexed when you ask them to show you how to program your transceiver and they usually make excuses why they are too busy to do it.

Some transceivers like my Yaesu FT 8900R - its so difficult, you are better off just using the programming cable and a aftermarket program...

Maybe this will explain a little of why I am so against handhelds for primary communications..

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider       |

I was thinking of getting a pair of handheld CBs for emergencies. I'm in the US just FYI since each country has a billion different standards. I saw a story about Hurricane Sandy, where a family member went out to help somebody down the road. Wouldn't it be nice if he brought a radio so he could communicate with the people he left at home? Since I my area was amazingly lucky and had literally zero damage even though the storm passed right over us. Things could have been very different. It got me thinking that if I were in that situation.

I was thinking of a set of UHF, GMRS, or even business band radios. I knew I would be breaking the law using them, but during an emergency I don't think anybody would come after me. I would not use them every day. I'm thinking CB might be a good idea too, since there are probably more people on it and they could listen in and possibly help. A good thing if emergency services are stretched if operating at all.

Eventually I plan on getting a HAM license, and being part of the local Amateur Radio Emergency Service (ARES).

What is your input? Any specific models or brands of radio I should get that fits the bill?

As you are planning on getting a ham license, you may want to look at this brand. Go to Amazon.com and search for Baofeng. They are small handy talkies that have an output of about 4 watts. They can be programmed for the ham bands and other frequencies. Be sure to get the programming cable and softwear for them. A pair should be less than $ 100.

Yes I'm planning on getting a HAM license, however I'm studying for the CPA first.
What about brands like Kenwood?  Aren't they know for decent quality?

They are fine brands. Just as Icom and Yeasu are. I was thinking of the price. You get about the same in any of them. I have a Wouxun HT that I bought several years ago. Many in the ham club have them and they work fine. That is about a $ 120 each radio.
There are many places to get the Wouxun. Here is one :
http://www.wouxun.us/item.php?item_id=216&category_id=46

I bought mine from a local dealer.

Justin-

If you do get the pair of handheld CB radios, they should be a relatively inexpensive "learning experience". They may be of some use, but you will learn they do not work over a very long distance. Their range is mostly limited by interference from the many other users of the Citizens Band, even if the radio at home is connected to an outdoor antenna.

Using GMRS radios may not have as much interference, but are limited to line-of-sight distances. If there is a nearby GMRS repeater with a high antenna, your range would be determined by the line-of-sight between each radio and the repeater, which could be several miles. If there are no repeaters in your area, you would need to install one of your own, perhaps on top of a tall building in your community.

The same is true with Ham Radio. Using a Two Meter repeater, your hand held radios might have a range of several miles. There are Ham Clubs that sponsor repeaters in most population centers, and many are involved in ARES and RACES emergency services. I suggest you look for Ham Clubs in your area. Some offer free Ham Radio License Classes to get you started. Take a look at the ARRL website, <http://www.arrl.org>.

Just remember, in a true emergency, power failure may keep all of your radio systems from working unless they have backup power. In many situations, the Cellular Telephone System may be the only working system in the early hours.

ARES - Amateur Radio Emergency Services - requires you to join ARES, to participate in at least 75% of their nets and activities..
Their nets takes place on 80 meters - 3.800 - 3.999 MHz - which requires you to have a General Class or higher license.

Both the Technician and the General requires you to pass a 35 question, multiple guess test.
Each time you upgrade - you will be requires to learn more.

The problem is - then you need a transceiver that can do 80 meters, a 80 meter antenna, feed line, a power supply, a tuner - since most antenna's are not resonant on 80 meters except for a 80 meters dipole - very large antenna, or a Barker & Williamson BWD 90 which is about the same size as a G5RV - fits in a space about 100 feet long and needs to be 60 or more feet in the air.

That is out of reach of most city dwellers and people who lives within a covenant - housing development plan.

Although amateur radio now has more licensed operators then any other time.
Historically - it is loosing its core members at a proportional rate, and the old members would need to mentor the new members to make them contributing members of society.

The problem is - most of the newer members comes from the CB radio and we can't teach them nothing because their mouths are open and their minds are shut.

CB radio mentality is if you cannot make contact - use more power.

They don't understand how antenna's radiate the power applied and they don't understand how communications works.
ALL THEY WANT TO DO IS TALK!

I would suggest that you find a real amateur radio club and join it.

Get some advice from some real hams - if you can find them.

Do as much internet research as possible - learn as much as you can learn.

The CB radios would be for short range, maybe half a mile, or around the neighborhood. When Sandy hit the cell phones were out for days. Even though my area was relatively unscathed, the towers were still down.
Just having the ability to talk to a family member back at the house would be nice.

I don't know of any GMRS repeaters in the area, but that's a good idea, I'll check it out.
Is there a website with all of them mapped out?

That's true, the cell phones worked for a while but not for long.

What about those TriSquare radios? I know TriSquare is toast, but was the technology any good?

Just as well, there aren't any repeaters around here.  Closest one is 40 miles.

The technology used in the TriSquare is the same as found in the iDen/ISM Nextel Cellphones when used in direcTalk Mode... They used the same Motorola chipset. These Phones are available on eBay for DIRT CHEAP ($10US or less each) They are Part15 Devices and ARE SECURE Comms with about the same range as FRS Radios. They are 902-928 Mhz Spread Spectrum

Radios... and if you are a Tech Class or Higher Ham, you can boost Output Power up to 10 Watts, and patch in any External Antennas you like.

I would contact the ARRL before I would make a investment like that..
There is a pretty good chance that what you are talking about is not legal.
I don't know if those phones are Part 97 approved and I am not sure if spread spectrum or digital phone is legal - because of the way it might be scrambled being a phone and all.
Second problem is that in order for any type of communications to work - you need to have two radios on the same frequency and I highly doubt that in a emergency you are going to find people operating on 900 mHz..

As a matter of fact, unless you are in a big metropolitan area - you probably won't even hear anyone operating on 220 MHz anymore..

Most Technician's are relegated to two meters phone - due to the fact that most walkie talkies are two meters and the cheapest mobile radios are two meters only..

Even just getting someone to buy a dual band transceiver or better equipment is like pulling teeth...

Like I tell all perspective hams - get a license and join a real ham radio club and LEARN... Find a Elmer - don't think that you can do it on your own..

Changes followed by "|".

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader
opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and
news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either
"radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including
uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved
is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us
at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

Your an Idiot.... There is NO Part 97 Approval required for Transmitters, only for Amplifiers that are built "For Sale"...
I mean, REALLY... Duh.....

These units are Part 15 Devices when used in the 902-928 Mhz ISM Band, which is co-Located with the 902-928 Ham Band, which is a Secondary Use Ham band.... So any use of the device, by a HAM of Tech Class or Higher, may ADD External Antennas and Amplifiers, as long as they do NOT exceed the Power Limit of 10 Watts, which was added to Part 97 this last spring, in a Report and Order from the FCC, which changed the Allowed Power Output for Spread Spectrum Frequency Hopping Systems in the 902-928 Mhz Ham Band to 10 Watts.... Duh....

Your Scrambling Theory, is also BOGUS, in that it is NOT Scrambling but Digital Modulation, which by it's nature is unrecoverable without knowing the Spreading Code, and Spectrum Chunk, USED..... DUH...

You just don't get it, do you.... These type Units are for SECURE Comms within a Group... Not for communicating with unknown Users.... They allow the Group, to communicate within their Group, knowing that their Comms ARE SECURE from Scanners, and DF'ing non-Group outsiders. They ALSO allow individuals in any Group, to move to Private SECURE Unit to Unit Mode, that allows only those two Units to have a SECURE Comms interchange, that can't be heard by any other of the Groups Users, by using the Programmable Ten Digit Unit Number of the other Unit for the Spreading Code, instead of using one of the 1-15 preProgrammed Spreading Codes, which are used in Squad Comms Mode.....

Must be nice to comment on Technology that you have NO CLUE, about...
Kind of like a Talking Head on the Boobtube.... Are you Blond?

Justin-

CB walkie-talkies might be capable of that if no one else was there. Considering that you can sometimes hear other people hundreds of miles away, half a mile might be optimistic!

Go ahead and get a pair. You probably have time before the next storm, to see how well they would work for you.

For local information about GMRS repeaters, look for a store that repairs the radios. They can probably fill you in on repeater availability, and will also sell you the radios.

I have an old Radio Shack? Science Fair Radio kit model 28-222 - without instructions..

I need to know where to connect the entenna coil wires, the speaker/headphone jack, and the battery. I have found points with W, R, and G that look like the place to connect the red, green, and white coil wires, but cannot figure out where the black goes. The speaker connections and battery connections are a complete mystery

Anyone have the instructions floating around or one you could send pictures of? It's been sitting here uncompleted for a LONG time.

Clare-

I found a discussion about your radio kit at <http://www.antiqueradios.com/forums/viewtopic.php?f=4&t=188702nk>. It includes links for data that has apparently been removed due to copyright problems.

If you can make contact with participants in that discussion, they may be able to answer your questions.

Another discussion at <http://www.antiqueradios.com/forums/viewtopic.php?f=4&t=196521> suggested that the Radio Shack version was very similar to a Graymark 536 AM Radio kit.  Perhaps someone in that discussion can answer your questions.

There are no simple handhelds. Even the least expensive ones are hard to program. The solution I've found is to get a handheld, and get programming software to go with it. The software is much easier to work with than the controls and menus on the rig. I have a Yaesu VX-8, a very complex little handheld, but I also have the RT Systems software to go with it, and it makes the rig quite easy to set up and use.

Missing a tone board. While you can live without a tone squelch, it is difficult not to get a long without a transmit tone board in some places.

I'd go for one of the many Motorola HT600's, MT1000's and similar rigs no longer legal for commerical or professional use in the US.

You mean like a PL tone?  There were plenty of articles around the time of the rig that dealt with adding that to small units, and it's probably relatively large compared to today's walkie talkies.

I think touch tone was more common in North America for repeater access (and other things). People were adding those to the fronts of walkie talkies back then too.

Yes, a PL board. You can still get the same Comspec encoders (or modern versions of them) that were put into the IC-2AT's. They cost more than the radio is worth and changing the frequency is difficult, You may have to figure out how to cut a hole in the case for a set of DIP switches.

Touch Tone was not used to access repeaters, it was used to make "autopatch" calls over landlines. The ICOM IC-2AT in fact was the short lived IC-2A model, with a factory installed (or user replaced front panel). It was significantly more money than the original, but it was a hot item because you could make free phone calls with it.

US regulations permitted all license classes the use of the autopatch, and most clubs charged minimal membership dues which included the calls.

It's a moot point these days, since the mid 1990's almost all hams have abandoned autopatchs for cell phones, and the phone lines removed from most repeaters.

Going back to the original question, if UHF is your band of choice, BAOFENG and other Chinese vendors sell 16 channel 5 watt HT's which have only volume, channel select knobs and PTT. They are much smaller, much lighter, much cheaper than old Motorola or other LMR HT's.

Amazon.com sells them for $27 with shipping in the US.

In order to use them, you need a BAFOENG/Wuxoun/Kenwood programing cable, a Windows XP computer, and the free but quirky software.

Geoff.

Having been a ham for around 40 years, I was just getting started about the time the repeaters were and have been keeping one up for about 35 years.

If someone does want a simple HT, I am in agreement with you. Just get one that has thesoftwear to program it with. I have a Woxun (or however you spell it) and it is a real pain to program. However with the softwear and a computer, it is easy. Best thing for me, I bought it at a local hamfest and local dealer. He had one that had about 90% of the repeaters in the area in it. He just cloned his HT to the one I bought. I took it home and used the computer to add what I wanted and that was the last thing I did. Now I just turn it on, set the volume and turn it to the 'chanel' I want to talk on. I do mash the scan button and get it to scan sometimes on several preset frequencies. The BOAFOENG may be a way to go too. I just have not looked at that one.

I guess the newer mobiles are that way too if they have a computer program. I am waiting on the new Anytone dual bander to come to a local dealer. The one I have in the car is about 10 years old and I am wanting to put it in the house and the new one in the car. I progrrammed the one in the car and could not tell you how to use it now except to get it to scan the memory and stop on what I want it to. It will do a lot, but I don't do much with it.

One thing I do not mind $ 10 or $ 15 for a programming cable, but it is a rip off paying more than that for one. Sort of like the Icom cable they sell for around $ 100..

Thanks for putting this information on the net, even though it is 19 years old!  I am wanting to buy a TM-710A and I'm trying to figure out how much the output power is so I won't over blow my amp!

What kind of amp are you talking about?

I'm not aware of any band plan that includes 800 MHz transmit for the amateur radio service!
There is a segment in the 900 mhz - but that is a horse of a different color.

If this is a USA comment, it would be illegal to use it on another radio service while using it for the amateur radio service.

The bottom line is - if you wanted to receive with it, you could do the same thing with most any cheap Uniden Bearcat type scanner.

Is this the modification you are talking about?

George visited GigaParts in Huntsville Alabama for Ham Radio Day on March 16th. We take a look at the store and visit with some of the manufacturers reps to find out what’s new. It was a great event at a great ‘Candy Store’.

38:45 of extra ALTV fun!

I have a Kenwood TH-28A and have an extended antenna on the unit. I have been inside and outside to reach a repeater and have not had any luck. I have even hooked it up to my 2 meter outside antenna.

The settings that I have on it are: - T S APO
Then when I press the LOW button I then see the following: M.

I then press LOW again then it switches to L

Pressing Low for a third time shows: EL

The repeater is set to take in negative.

It is approximately 30+ miles away.

I am at a loss as to what the problem is.

Would someone know what the solution is?

Does the repeater require an access tone? If so, do you have your radio set to the proper one?

The T is illuminated for the Tone.  Yes, a tone is required.  But it still does not hit the repeater.
I can hear others on the repeater, and try to reply but it does not work.

And you're sure it's the correct tone?

Is there another ham in your area you could ask for help? Preferably someone who uses that repeater? They might know of any quirk that's preventing you from accessing it.

I did have another ham check out the unit.  It was found that the transmit frequency was off, so it got corrected.  Now, I can transmit and receive.

Thanks for the tip.

The bottom line is that the repeater is too far away.

Basic physic's 101 - all signals reduce at the square of the distance away.

You wasted your money when you bought a walkie talkie...

He said another ham looked at it, and the rig was off frequency, and now it works fine.

That sure doesn't sound like an issue of distance, or walkie talkie.

I for one do not use the Kenwood as a Walkie-Talkie. Evidently you are NOT a Licensed Ham, which I am.

Additionally, you would know if you were a ham that many repeaters have offsets which require a frequency difference between input and transmit exit.

Did anybody else go out there and brave the floods?

Just returned from an exhausting weekend. The outside flea markets were only open on Saturday and Sunday, while the commerical exhibits (inside) were open all three days. It also rained two out of the three days; guess which ones? Parking was a disaster; because of the rain, the usually spacious unpaved fields behind the arena were closed, and people were parking anywhere and everywhere. Tow trucks were out in force, and I'm sure the local auto pound made plenty of money.

A lot of new amateur transceivers are coming out with provisions for computer control. The cheaper rigs provide only for frequency control, while the more expensive ones allow you to get to more of the knobs from the interface. Yaesu has the TS-980 and the FT-757GX with their "CAT" (Computer Assisted Tuning), while a number of Icom transceivers have had accessory connectors allowing external frequency control for some time. Seems to me that shared club HF "remote base" stations should become quite common.

Multiband VHF/UHF rigs (some supporting full duplex cross banding, e.g., for satellites) are starting to appear; both Yaesu (FT-726R) and Kenwood (TS-780) have them. The Yaesu looks especially nice because you can choose the three bands segments you want as plug-ins. More and more 70cm multimode rigs are also appearing, but most seem to restrict you to only a 10 mhz segment of the band (440-450 mhz, or, more commonly, 430-440 mhz). 1.2 Ghz stuff is just now starting to appear; Icom has a 1.2 Ghz mobile FM transceiver, and more 1.2 Ghz transverters and transmitting converters are coming out, many especially designed for the 1269 mhz Phase 3B Mode L uplink. Technology moves on!

Phil

Try tuning it up into a dummy load on 24.930 MHz using the 15 meter position.

That is what I plan to do although Rob at Ameritron says if the WARC mod was done and the correct Rf choke is installed then there should be no problem.

I have a Yaesu FT200M which I have installed in my truck for the purpose of transmitting an APRS signal on 144.390. Each time I set the radio on this frequency, turn the radio off and then back on, the frequency changes to 144.385. Turn it off and on again and it tunes to 144.380, etc., etc.

Anyone have any idea how to turn this "feature" off so the radio stays on 144.390 when I turn it on and then off? I've read through the manual but don't see anything.

Thanks.

Tom, I suspect that there might be a cabling issue that is causing the radio to erroneously register a push of the "down" button on the microphone (if that model is so equipped). I ran into a similar issue with an FT-2800M a few years ago; that model in particular was also susceptible to erratic behavior from RF coming in through the microphone line.

I guess the best place to start would be to disconnect your APRS interface and see if the problem persists. If it goes away with the interface disconnected, it could be a cabling issue.

Tom-

I suggest you use a memory channel preset to 144.390.  If memory channels are tunable, look for a setting to turn that feature off.

It is possible your frequency adjust knob is set right at the point where it changes frequency.  This could be purely random, or could be due to a defective rotary encoder.

Another possibility might be that the radio has a CMOS battery that is getting weak.

What could be causing low output on USB/LSB on all bands? The microphone is good and works great on my another TS-450, the watt meter is a Bird wattmeter and indicates full power on my another TS-450 under identical conditions, using a constant tone (whistle) to drive the microphone, using a 50 ohm dummy load, the carrier knob and microphone gain are full up. The same radio puts out full 100+ watts on all bands when using CW or FSK.

Yorklynyankee, you did not mention how low was the power. If it was in the neighborhood of 80 watts, I would not worry about it unless there were reports of distorted audio.

It sounds like the carrier is normal, judging by the CW/FSK power.

I suggest you download the TS-450/690 service manual, and look for adjustments that involve ALC and/or balanced modulator.

One place that should have the manual is: <http://www.mods.dk>. You must register in order to download, and there are limits on how often unless you donate.

Its probably tired from being used too much on 11 meters.....

Maybe it is folding back because of a high SWR - you don't run CW and FSK in the same part of the band as phone. Are you checking it into a true 50 ohm dummy load or the antenna?

Did you check your antenna since last winter - maybe it stretched from ice / wind blowing etc.
Maybe your coax has issues.

No way to know because my crystal ball is broke.

There is always a certain segment of the population that doesn't understand SSB and always wants 100% performance out of everything and will strive to squeeze every last watt out of something, regardless of if it worked ok or not before they started messing with it.

In CB talk that is called Peak n Tune.

You won't ever notice any difference in perceived signals strength between 80 watts and 100 watts on most phone conversations.. I wouldn't worry about it.

Are you fully modulating the signal when you are measuring it with your Bird meter? CQ CQ CQ K K K P P P D D D You will only see full signal strength when it is fully modulated...
CW and FSK is 100% duty cycle - fully modulated all the time.

Running the transmitter at full power for any length of time will damage it on FSK.
Its not designed to be used that way with more then about 30 or 40 watts.

Does it have an auto tuner?

Is it turned on or off?

Channel Jumper is an Idiot, and obviously has never operated a TS-450....

More than likely what you are seeing is the ALC foldback, lowering the Gain, in the TX Gain Stage, that drives the Final Amp Circuit. Having both TS450's and TS 690's here, this is very common, to have the Radio do this when it comes from the Factory, or a Factory Trained Tech, after a Service Call.... the Factory sets the ALC High, so that the radio will ALWAYS meet, the published IMD Spec. You can, by readjusting the ALC Feedback Circuit, setup the TX to output TX PEP Power and a reasonable Average Power as shown on a non-PEP Wattmeter, without compromising the IMD level of the resultant Transmissions, in any significant way.

Just Say'en.... YMMV.....

Thank all of you for your suggestions. Just for the record, I don't operate CB radio, I am a retired Research & Development electrical engineer from HP, and I have a masters degree in Electrical Engineering.... now to answer some of the questions. As I mentioned in my first posting the radio is connected to a 50 dummy load. By low output power I mean 5~10 watts, I have tried two different microphones. I have another Kenwood TS-450 so I have a working radio to compare their outputs. When I whistle into the radio using USB/LSB on any bands at any frequency, the radio will only put out 5~10 watts. Whereas under identical conditions the working radio will put out 100 watts. There is absolutely NO DOUBT that this radio's USB/LSB is not working. The same radio puts out 100+ watts on CW and FSK. I suspect something in the balanced modulator, but I am looking for someone who has encountered a problem like this before. This radio is known for having some common problems, like C104, so I was hoping that there was another frequently failed component that causes this problem.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader
opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/
d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider        |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup.  After a successful trial          |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this            |
change permanently.                                                            |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and
news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either
"radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including
uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved
is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us
at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved.  We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded

name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

rec.radio.amateur.antenna |
rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors |
rec.radio.amateur.dx |
rec.radio.amateur.equipment |
rec.radio.amateur.homebrew |
rec.radio.amateur.moderated |
rec.radio.amateur.space |

I have several 1kW Larcan television transmitter modules available.
These are "low-split" modules and do not require modification for 6-meters. They will also cover the 70MHz / 4-meter band with no changes.

A full write up and pictures are available at http://www.gemoto.com/LarcanPA.htm
(Note: This is NOT my web page and is supplied for information purposes only)

With some work, these amplifiers will produce well over 1kW on 2 meters.

RF input and DC input connectors are included. Other parts such as DC power supply 50V @ 50A, RF coaxial relays, cooling fans, etc are needed to get operational. Some assembly required.

Packaged weight is about 20kg / 44 pounds. The amplifier module itself weighs about 14kg / 31 pounds.

Price is $370 plus packing and shipping from Nova Scotia, Canada. Total cost approx $455 - $485 throughout the USA. Proceeds of the sale go towards my local club. PayPal preferred.

Further information, pictures, etc available on my web page.

The frequency stability of my HP3312A function generator is poor, very annoying for many practical use. I am trying to determine whether that behavior is fairly normal for function generators, or my particular unit has got a problem.

What is your experience on function generators frequency stability?

Thanks & 73

Any of the VCO-based function generators, such as the 3312A, are going to be wobbly in terms of not only stability but ability to generate a specific frequency or range of frequencies.

You need to move to a synthesized source to get better results. One candidate would be the HP 3314A, which is a synthesized generator, and covers up to 20 MHz.

I have one of these; it's very flexible, and stable. It doesn't have the ability to lock to an external standard, but it is crystal controlled.

With a synthesized device, you have digital control over frequency, sweep parameters, and with something like the 3314A, you also have digital control over amplitude and offset.

eBay offers some inexpensive function generator boards as well.

Changes followed by "|".

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader
opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/
d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider       |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
```

period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

I'm getting a substantial refund check this year. I need advice regarding some new hard ware.

I'm looking at the FT-950 from Yaesu or Kenwood TS-590 and Icom IC-7200.

I have a FT897 currently and have some familiarity with their way of doing things. I'm not totally in love with all of their design choices however.

But other than that, I'm open minded.

Suggestions?

All three have been reviewed in QST. I suggest you read and review the articles and technical measurements from these units. Much could also depend on your intended usage. Portable vs. mobile vs. home station; ssb vs. cw; what is your total budget; etc. Good luck on your research. For a similar total monetary outlay, there might be more capable rig availaable.

Yes, but I was looking for personal recommendations. I _have_ read the reviews. But these are written by experienced operators and are hardly ever critical.

But let me add that the radio is for base operations. I have a capable radio (FT 897) for mobile use. I like it allot. However I'm open to other opinions..

Perhaps someone has used two from my list and can offer a comparison of those two radios. I'm not an experienced user but this isn't my first day either. Say top of the newbee level or the bottom of the intermediate level. Plenty of things to learn.

Not an unlimited budget, around $2000. I'm 60 and I am thinking about a radio that will last me the rest of my days.

What can't you understand?

Call Bob at Ham Radio Outlet in Delaware.
Unless you have $3300 + for a Ten Tec - the only other transceiver you can afford that does it all well is the Kenwood TS 590S....

Most hams wouldn't waste their money on two relatively new rigs at the same time unless they had a unlimited budget or had a problem with the one or the other.   And I am not aware of any supplier that would just take the one back - USED and replace it with another new transceiver of a different manufacturer.

Your best bet is to drive to a ham radio store and look at them before you buy them.
My experience came from buying a transceiver sight unseen - by reputation and a recommendation only.

If the TS 590S has only been released here in the USA for one year, there is not going to be a lot written about it other then a glowing report written by the ARRL Labs that was posted in QST Magazine last year....

No one can hold your hand and no one can tell you what to buy.
Regardless of what they tell you - if you look hard enough, with a electron microscope - you will eventually find something wrong with all of them.
The Kenwood is just too new to have problems yet.
There isn't even any updates available for the one I bought last September.

Dealers may be bias towards a more profitable model. Not all of 'em perhaps.

I was unaware of the short time the Kenwood (590) had been in the market. However soliciting

opinions on various models of radios isn't a waste of time. Maybe I should have listed the Kenwood 2000 as an option.

Prolly pretty uncommon. That's why I didn't think of it.

I was only asking for opinions. My hand-holding days are far behind me. I'm prepared to live by whatever choice I make. But if I can avoid an obvious land mine, why not.

I'm not looking for the perfect radio (for me) I don't know enough about ham radio to do that sort of checking - to find every defect.

So, after reading your message (several times) I can't find your ideas on my request for info. Did I miss them/it?

The reason I recommended BOB @ Ham Radio Outlet is because I have dealt with BOB personally and he has never screwed me.
I'm not completely sure about his bio - but I believe that he has been a ham 40 - 50 years, the same as many of my friends who recommended the TS 590 to me.

On the other hand - you asked about the Kenwood TS 2000 - and I do have experience with the TS 2000.
The TS 2000 is a very old design - I have QST magazines here from 1999 that has that model advertised, it is a very old design.
I would put it in the same class as the ICOM 746 Pro - a lot to go wrong in a little box. http://www.eham.net/reviews/detail/1249

Nobody is going to buy one if they hear that it sucks and is not a very good transceiver.
Most people that does buy one does not have anything else of comparative value to compare it to.
Like making chicken soup out of chicken poop.
Kenwood does a very good job of hiding the fact that the TS 2000 is a compromise between a good HF transceiver and a fairly good VHF / UHF transceiver.
Only, when you combine the two - you have to give up something to get something.
Like buying a 1985 Z/28 - IROC Z/28 Camaro and finding out that the factory stock tires are no good in the rain and the car doesn't go anywhere in the snow. On dry / hot pavement - it is a good performer - period...

Another factor in the 2000 that I do not like is the fact that when it breaks you are not only out a HF radio, but also your primary VHF and UHF radio....

Its much easier to purchase the 590 and a inexpensive mobile such as the Yaesu 8800 or 8900 and have multiband coverage and the opportunity to cross repeat in a emergency then to have a single band VHF transceiver which might be cheaper - but doesn't do anything else such as APRS or UHF or cross repeat.....

If money is an issue, you could purchase the Kenwood TS 480 SAT and still have the autotuner feature and the capability of working mobile. Although the 590 also makes a pretty good mobile itself...

Like the robot on Lost in Space , I will tell you - warning, warning, danger, danger -- do not buy the ICOM Will Robinson...
Let them make a bunch of them and then let someone else see if they are any good before you plunk down your hard earned cabbage on one...

The FT 950 is another outdated transceiver with it's own set of issues.
The one my friend had, which I used a couple of times was a piece of junk.
When he died, it was arcing inside of the microphone - with no amplifier connected and sitting side by side - comparing it against the Icom 746 pro with 100 watts on the same antenna 10 miles apart.
The guys with the Icoms were checking into the nets on 160 meters and the guy with the Yaesu wasn't being heard....
And the guys with the Icom's were down in the valley and the guy with the Yaesu was on top of a large hill - where he could talk 2 meters for 70 miles the way you would talk with your walkie talkie to the local repeaters...

Like I said before, I had several opportunities to buy it, even for $700.00 and did not and it was only 9 months old when they sold it.

...then there's the ad in the QST I received today for a new Kenwood transceiver to be announced @ Dayton next month. I had several Kenwood xceivers - a 520 then an 820 and an 870 - and was happy with all of them.
But Kenwood seems to have skipped the dance recently - twice at least!
It'll be interesting to see what they roll out. Being potentially a newer design than the competition... who knows?

You can get into a TenTec for that much money. Since you have time to check it out, there are some good deals out there but be very careful in the used market. Most of us feel there is no ethical way to sell a lightning struck transceiver, regardless of brand.

Having said that Ham Radio Outlet has a very good reputation here in the Piedmont area of North Carolina.

TenTec takes a personal interest in every customer. They (and everyone else) can be checked out pretty well on YouTube.

I have had my TenTec Jupiter since the were first available and I am willing to upgrade when something better comes along. That just has not happened.

I am 72 this month and I hope that I am young enough to need another radio in the future.

However, if Yaesu does not come up with the Free Mod to make my FT-857 comply with the 60 meter changes, I am looking at my last Yaesu product. Since this is to be a long term radio, consider issues such as that!

On the other hand, Ten-Tec has a 30-day return policy for new gear (they only sell direct).

Select-A-Tenna is a LARGE Passive Loop and can produce 30DB signal gain

This model has a 3.5mm Mini Jack allowing connection DIRECTLY to a Radio to enable Late Night AM DXing or AM Listening in addition to your QRP Activities.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider       |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup.  After a successful trial         |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this           |
change permanently.                                                           |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

radio/personal-intro

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

rec.radio.amateur.antenna |
rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors |
rec.radio.amateur.dx |
rec.radio.amateur.equipment |
rec.radio.amateur.homebrew |
rec.radio.amateur.moderated |
rec.radio.amateur.space |

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

For more information about our newsgroup, see:

Changes followed by "|".

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

I concur. I use an HP 3325A. It's pretty solid, a synthesized unit, and it can be used with an external reference. They're old enough to be cheap on the used market, yet new enough to be as featureful as we expect these days.

That said, the OP's 3312A shouldn't be THAT bad. Is it possible the main oscillator's performance is being spoiled by aging components, like dried-out electrolytic capacitors and such?

Going to trek in Tibet. Would like to take 2-way radios (Motorola Spirit UHF).

Is there a published list of available & unavailable frequencies in PRC?

Thanks.

The PRC restricts the import of radio transmitting equipment, other than the temporary import of mobile phones. You need to ask this question of your Chinese embassy. You would need an import licence and my guess is that you will not get one.

I don't know if there are any (transmitting) licence exempt allocations, or whether they are available to non-citizens.

Officials of totalitarian police states don't have to give explanations.

Probably the easiest way of getting radios for use in Tibet is to source them locally, and get them shipped to a convenient collection point.
China and Hong Kong are certainly not short of manufacturers!

Even for an American in the UK, that would be the best approach, as radios not specifically approved for PMR 446 are not covered by the class licence.

For China, it will be part a question of protecting their own industry and partly a national security issue. Given its history, national security is likely to be a particularly important issue in Tibet.

I note that the OP's intended radio (Motorola Spirit UHF) is 1 channel.
2W. The Chinese public service radios are only 0.5W (and with a tiddly antenna), so even if these are readily available, they might not be quite suitable.

>For China, it will be part a question of protecting their own industry

Importing two-way radios into China would probably not be threatening their own industry. They probably originated there in the first place!

It says in
http://tel_archives.ofca.gov.hk/en/ad-comm/tsac/ns-paper/nsp2002p3.pdf

"In December 2001, the Ministry of Information Industry of China announced that short-range portable radio transceivers, or
"walkie-talkies", operating in the band 409.7500 – 409.9875 MHz with transmitter power not exceeding 0.5W were exempted from licensing."

Presumably these are legal to use throughout all of China - but you never know. In certain countries, being legal does not guarantee you won't have problems. Only a couple of weeks ago, a German radio amateur, operating absolutely 100% legally when on holiday in Greece, was arrested and hauled before the courts. I believe he is back home, but may need to return for a full trial.

Unless Ofcom has failed to update their information, it also has to have things like a permanently attached antenna, absolute power limits, etc., basically to make it non-trivial to modify outside of the specification.
  As pointed out elsewhere, the proposed equipment doesn't comply with those conditions, so wouldn't have been legal for PMR 446 use.

I used approved loosely, to mean designed to meet the conditions of the licence exemption.

Where in the current interface requirement does it say anything about a permanently attached antenna?

That seems to be a fairly brief summary. More detail is in the older RA document:
http://www.ofcom.org.uk/static/archive/ra/publication/ra_info/ra357.htm

"5. RADIO EQUIPMENT
PMR 446 radio equipment must be handportable, have an integral antenna, have a maximum ERP of 500 mW and be compliant with ETS 300 296."

I doubt if they have changed the technical specs.

But change the specs. is exactly what they have done.
ra357 is only there as an archive and is no longer the applicable document. The current interface document is IR2009.

Changes followed by "|".

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |
amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to
rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated
amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. After a successful trial |
period (90 days, through early July 2009), we decided to adopt this |
change permanently. |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

radio/personal-intro
Subject: Guide to the rec.radio Newsgroups
Maintainer: jeffreyh@Hawaii.Edu (Jeffrey Herman)
Last Posted: 9 Nov 2001 06:18:17 GMT
Posting-Frequency: 15th of each month

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

rec.radio.amateur.antenna |
rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors |
rec.radio.amateur.dx |
rec.radio.amateur.equipment |
rec.radio.amateur.homebrew |
rec.radio.amateur.moderated |
rec.radio.amateur.space |

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

For more information about our newsgroup, see:

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-info-request@panix.com.

I have one and several others in the local club have them.  They work very well , especially for around $ 100 to $ 120.

You do need the programming cable with them.  They can be programmed without it, but it is so much easier to use the computer.  If you get the cable, make sure you push itf something like it is not communicating.   If you  do
, check the com port and make sure it is really pluged in all the way.

There is a free program from them that will program it, but a beter one for free is called KG-UV Commander.

Fellow Drake Enthusiasts,
The NEW R.L. Drake Virtual Museum is here http://www.drakemuseum.com . It's being launched page by page. You may follow my work at the new webiste.

The R.L. Drake Virtual Museum is under construction so there's not much there yet, but "stay tuned" ! Please observe that links in the menu is activated when the pages are ready to be presented.

The former R.L. Drake Virtual Museum http://www.dproducts.be/drake_museum/ has been closed.

Thanks to all the 450.000 vistors!

The main reason for closing it, is that my friend who I had the website together with, passed away last Christmas.

I have decided to build up a NEW Drake Virtual Museum from scratch. It will contain a lot of new pictures and info in addition to what were found in the former museum.

Welcome to The (NEW) R.L. Drake Virtual Museum www.drakemuseum.com

Sindre, LA6OP   sindtorp@online.no

Many people use Motorola receivers.

Some use the older repeaters such as the MCS-2000 or MSF-5000, and many use the Maxtrac and similar radios.

There are many two channel VHF 25kHz radios floating around, most too good for the dumpster but not good enough to use. Once they become illegal for commerical operation (Jan 2013), they will end up in the dumpster.

The Maxtracs and MSF-5000's need to be programmed, but that's not too difficult to find someone to do it for you if you can not do it yourself.

Many of them have discriminator output which is pre squelch, pre shaping and filtering and pre volume control. On the front panel is a speaker and volume control, but you can fit an external speaker if needed.

Repeater builder.com has plenty of articles on them.

They are very popular, especially based on price. However, they normally do NOT meet specs, though they are sold with the claim that they do. Often the 2nd harmonic of 2 meters is 10 db or more above spec. QST found this in a test of one of the many versions.

An organization I know was planning on having some custom units made up. After several weeks of going back and forth with the manufacturer and not being able to get a straight answer, they gave up. At least one picture from their spectrum analyzer was clearly doctored.

That wasn't the Woxoun, that was the Baofeng which is a very different radio made by a very different company.

Even then it was taken out of context.

The Baofeng UV-3R is wide band radio (76-512 mHz) with firmware and filtering to limit it to reception on the FM broadcast band and reception and transmission from 136-174 and 400-470 mHz. You can stretch the bands with software, but the results are not always worth it.

The original radio was shipped as a two band radio with VHF and UHF antennas.

Without an antenna there is a spur at 2x the 2m band, 300mHz. With a 2m resonant antenna such as the one supplied with the radio or the UHF one, there is no resonance at 300mHz, and the spur is suppressed.

The problem was noticable if you used a wide band antenna, such as a discone.

The later production units had additional filtering added to prevent this.
That model is no longer made having been replaced with the UV-3R Mark II and the UV-3R+ (plus) both of which have the filtering.

In either case, buying a Woxoun or a Baofeng, you don't have to worry.

Geoff.

Complete TS-830s station with SP-230 speaker, PC-1 Phone patch, and MC-50 mic.
Radio works extremely well and I would say it's an 8/10 in cosmetics with no issues and have new 6146B's installed.
$550 plus shipping.

the other freq issue that caught my eye was the PL tones - since most repeaters around our urban area are all PL encoded, the xmit tones have to be dead on - in both winter cold & summer hot weather -

OK, I'm a bit confused.  At the top, you say it meets or beats FCC technical standards then and at the bottom, you say hams would be lowering their standards buying this "piece of crap".  So why is it junk?  Because it wears down a battery in use?  So would a mobile or base radio running on a car battery...

I think he was complaining because the early radios (before Part 90 certification) were not quite compliant on 2m in terms of spurious radiation. In practice they were ok if you used a resonant antenna.

Once they were "cleaned up" for part 90 certification, they were fine.

This is pretty common with Chinese radios, the CW QRP rig sold by both MFJ and Ten-Tec were the same way. The original radios sold from China as a kit and later from Canada via eBay also lacked proper filtering.

The radios were three band, the Ten-Tec version is two band, the MFJ version is single band. Both have improved filtering and are legal in the US.

Note that several of the Japanese companies are using factories in China, so the difference between a name brand an unknown brand may be very little.

Bottom line, if you bought them from eBay vendors a year ago, you may have problems, if you buy them today it should be ok.

Geoff.

That amp is a PIECE OF CB SHIT.

It's junk.

It was junk when it was "designed," it was junk when it was on the air, and it's junk now.

Tell you what, you send $100 to my PayPal account and I'll take it off your hands. When it arrives at my place, I'll put a couple of 12-gauge blasts through it to keep that POS off the air.

In fact, it's probably illegal for you to be offering it for sale.

I note there's no bandswitch on it, meaning, it operates on only one band -- 11 Meters -- where linears are illegal.

Here's a forum where someone has posted close-up photos of this piece of shit -- look at the construction -- look at the PC boards -- JUNK -- and it looks as though it was soldered by a troop of monkeys.
http://www.worldwidedx.com/general-cb-services-discussion/25842-eagle-525-base-linear-not-golden-browning-2.html

R6000 Multiband Vertical
The R6000 is a 6 through 20 meter, no ground radial antenna. It includes many of the features of the R8, R7 and R5 antennas. R6000 means excellent performance, easy installation and use, slim silhouette and high reliability. There are no traps used on 6, 10 and 15 meters for maximum efficiency and power handling. The R6000 employs quarter wavelength stubs on 10 and 15 meters to replace standard trap coils. The result is lower loss and wider bandwidth. The R6000 covers all bands 6 through 15 meters at a VSWR under 2:1. On 20 meters you can select the top 300 KHz or bottom 300 KHz of the band. The R6000 weighs only 12-1/2 pounds (5.6 kg). It is lightweight and easy to mount for portable or permanent installations. Machined aluminum clamps and UV stable insulators guarantee years of reliable service. The R6000 comes with the standard Cushcraft warranty of one year from purchase - plus the industry's leading technical support team stands behind each Cushcraft antenna. The R6000 makes an excellent diversity antenna to complement even the most complete stations, or pack up the R6000 for a trip to the DX location of your dreams.

Plus you need a tower and rotator for another pile of money.

Sometimes you have to put up what you can such as a ham I talked to the other day that was on a lot that was about 40 feet by 100 feet.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team had decided to consider |

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

radio/personal-intro

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

rec.radio.amateur.antenna |
rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors |
rec.radio.amateur.dx |
rec.radio.amateur.equipment |
rec.radio.amateur.homebrew |
rec.radio.amateur.moderated |
rec.radio.amateur.space |

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original

article ourselves.

I went to the various MOD sites and almost all of the sites say that you should remove from the row of 9 SMD jumpers on the main boad:

Leave jumper 1006 in place

Place jumpers on:

1008
1009 leave blank:

1001
1002
1003 1004
1005

OK here is the strange part.

My FT-857D has no jumper 1006, only jumpers 1001 and 1002.

In my searches across the web for information, one fellow said that he removed jumpers 1001 and 1002, and the radio locked up, and he had to send it back to Yaesu for expensive repairs. He said they told him that the later radios were changed so they could not be modded, which sounds like baloney to me, how would MARS operators use them?

My reason for wanting the mod is that the 60 M frequencies are pre-programmed in the USA versions, and as you probably know the frequencies have changed. I wrote to Yaesu to ask them if they would be coming out with a way to update the 60 meter changes, and they said no plans to make this available. So much for Yaesu support. This really got my goat as several of my old timer buddies will be working on the new QRG's and I have no way to use the Yaesu rig to make contact.

OK, after a long winded explain, here is the question. Has anyone out there done a successful MARS mod on the FT-857D with just the two jumpers, and if so, can you steer me in the right direction, as I don't want to end up having to face an expensive repair. I have searched probably over 100 sites, most go back to the same sites, and yet to have found any instructions for the version of the radio here.

Thanks for any help on making the changes. I tried to just go to those frequences and when you hit the MIC key you get TRANSMIT ERROR on the display.... Bummer....

Jim

I am very new to this hobby. I would really like to listen to 9870 KHz All India Radio. I have a Kaito WRX-911 which I bought from Amazon and it doesn't really receive the signal. I was only able to hear the station for 5 second once and it was very very weak. I live in Los Angeles, CA.

Can you please suggest a radio which will work best for my purpose.

Thanks,
vir

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article       |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since      |
it was written, including:                                                    |

 rec.radio.amateur.antenna                                                    |
 rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors                                                |
 rec.radio.amateur.dx                                                         |

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

```
 radio/swap-guide
 Subject: Rec.radio.swap FAQ: A Guide to Buying and Selling on Usenet
 Maintainer: jeffreyh@Hawaii.Edu (Jeffrey Herman)
 Last Posted: 6 Nov 2001 19:25:51 GMT
 Posting-Frequency: Monthly

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

For more information about our newsgroup, see:

http://www.panix.com/~rram/usenet/rri/index.html

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-info-request@panix.com.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team has decided to consider amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. We are currently trying this on a temporary basis (90 days, through early July 2009), and adopt it permanently if successful.

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

radio/personal-intro

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |

```
 rec.radio.amateur.antenna                                               |
 rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors                                           |

Want to buy: Cable for Multi-Elmac M-1070/AF-68/PMR-8
This is a 3 headed cable.  11 pin "octal", 10 pin Jones plug, and 15 pin Jones plug.
I'll buy separate ones and join them, if that's the best I can find.
The separate ones would be either, 11 and 10, or the 11 and 15.

Hi Ted,
Try googling Funcube dongle.This has got to be the best thing sinced the invasion of jap radios.Covers approx 64Mhz to over 2Ghz and there is an up converter to cover the HF bands. Costs under $200 excluding the converter.
It just plugs into a USB port of a computer.Has also got it's own soundcard.
If you get one i'm sure you won't be dissapointed.
Regards -
Steve VK4ADA\ZL3JR

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.swap (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/swap-guide/):

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval.

This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

Using a new Icom IC-9100, I'm getting "unknown device" when I connect the USB cable to my computer. I'm running 64 bit version of windows 7 ultimate.

Before I connected my radio to the computer, i installed the USB drivers downloaded from ICOM, and rebooted, then connected IC-9100 using the USB cable and turned the IC-9100 on.

I have even tried updated driver from http://www.silabs.com/products/mcu/Pages/USBtoUARTBridgeVCPDrivers.aspx

I'm still getting Unknown Device in windows device manager. I tried to reboot and reconnect, but nothing works.

Anyone have a solution to this problem?

Perhaps someone could help.

I have an old (1990's) BMI Nitelogger (II?) and need to know the voltage used by this device. I have a Condor 9 volt 9 watt supply that I think may have been originally included with it, but am unsure and don't want to burn it up testing.

Have several different possible "wall warts", thus my problem.

Thanks.

The July 2003 Monitoring Times mentions that the Nitelogger II is (was) available from:

In Compliance Corp
3260 N Hayden Road #106

There was an article about the Nitelogger II in the Aug 1996 Monitoring Times (see http://monitoringtime.com/html/mt96index.html for reprint info)

Have you checked out Amateur Electronic Supply (AES) or Ham Radio Outlet (HRO)? Don't know CO sales tax laws but some states do not tax on-line sales if the sale originates out-of-state.
http://www.aesham.com/
http://www.hamradio.com/

Also, join the Yahoo FT-857 group. Someone there may have one for sale, though it will be used.

Rockwell-Collins still makes the size J filters. From the 2005 catalogue:

NSN	Type	Bandwidth
526-9089-000	F455J-31	2.8
526-9091-000	F455J-60	5.5
526-9154-000	F455J-05	0.38
526-9155-000	F455J-15	1.2
526-9156-000	F455J-21	2

You can also make adaptors out of perfboard to fit the PC board mount filters onto a socket, if you find them at a hamfest.

Otherwise try collinsfilters@rockwellcollins.com.

The Controller has power, the fuse is good,the light's work. It,s stuck at 80
Degree's from true
North.

But

The rotor will not turn!

Is there anything else it could be other than the Rotor or the 8 wire cable.

This unit is less than 1 year old.

Thanks for your time.

Does 'better' mean tighter or less ringing?

There are sure times when I wish I had a less nasty-sounding filter for AM on the R-390.

It might help to know the model in question.

Some things to check are the continuity of the wires to the motor windings, and whether there is a purely mechanical jam. Finally, most/many rotors have a phase shift capacitor between windings. If they fail open, everything will look fine, but the rotor will not develop enough torque to turn the antenna.

Changes followed by "|".

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team has decided to consider amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. We are currently trying this on a temporary basis (90 days, through early July 2009), and adopt it permanently if successful.

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

I'll have to put on my "to do" list that I need to search the web for sources of these filters (as well as ER magazine). And, see if Collins has a website of their own (I should have done that, too, but I have variable lazyness...and I'm not in a big hurry on this project).

I did send to that Collins email address a request for further information and have not, as yet, received an answer (I notice email responses to email queries can be all over the spectrum from minutes later to days later to no answer at all).

For a nice-sounding CW filter, I have used an audio frequency equalizer (picked up mine from a thrift store for $5, its a Realistic [Radio Shack] jobber). I max boost 500 Hz sliding pot on both channels, and max depress the pots on all other frequencies, and feed speaker output into input of one channel, output of that channel into input of the other channel, and run output of other channel into input of an amplifier driving either a speaker or earphones. Bandwidth "sounds" (not measured) like maybe about 300-400 Hz. The next frequencies above and below 500 Hz are 250 Hz and 1 kHz. I might get narrower if I boost at 250, etc, but tone is too low for my ears. I thought I wasn't getting any detectable ringing at all on this setup. The calibrations are max/min 12 db, so that should put unwanted frequencies down 24+ db per channel, or 48 db for both, no?

Scott, for AM on the R-390: are you sure its the filter? Not distortion in the audio string? Have you tried any other post detection path (eg. a separate receiver, even an old AM radio where you feet the 455 kc output from the R-390 to the input of the IF on the AM radio and see what audio quality you can get? I'm not familiar with the R390 (does it have mechanical filters?).

I have several 1kW television transmitter modules that will work fine on 6 meters.

A full write up and pictures are available here.
http://www.gemoto.com/LarcanPA.htm

These are the "low-split" modules that do not require any further modification.

With some work, these amplifiers will produce well over 1kW on 2 meters.
  Check this writeup by Brian Justin, WA1ZMS
http://members.rennlist.org/warren/larcan_2m.pdf

RF input and DC input connectors are included but other parts are needed to get operational. DC power supply 50V @ 50A, RF coaxial relays, cooling fans, etc. Some assembly required. :)

Price as per the web page above, $370 plus packing and shipping from Nova Scotia, Canada. Total cost approx $455 - $470. Proceeds of the sale go towards my ham club.

Contact info on my original ad on QRZ.

You might try setting the filters on the two ears a little bit different, so that higher tones are to the right and lower tones are to the left. I find this helps pick out signals from a pileup.

The filters on those cheap EQs are probably fairly wide; you can measure the Q with a meter and a signal generator if you want to really know.

There is lots of distortion in the audio string, although the line output is definitely much cleaner than the speaker level output. However, there is just outrageous amounts of ringing on the 8KC filter. If I go to the 16 KC filter it's much cleaner but of course there's a wider bandwidth too.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

radio/personal-intro
Subject: Guide to the rec.radio Newsgroups
Maintainer: jeffreyh@Hawaii.Edu (Jeffrey Herman)
Last Posted: 9 Nov 2001 06:18:17 GMT
Posting-Frequency: 15th of each month

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

rec.radio.amateur.antenna |
rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors |
rec.radio.amateur.dx |

 rec.radio.amateur.equipment |
 rec.radio.amateur.homebrew |
 rec.radio.amateur.moderated |
 rec.radio.amateur.space |

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

For more information about our newsgroup, see:

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-info-request@panix.com.

FWIW, I have an F 455 J 31 in front of me that I'd be happy to part with for any reasonable payment. As far as I know, it's in good condition, removed from (if I'm not mistaken) a Collins 490T HF avionics transceiver. I'd be happy to check it on an HP8753ES network analyzer to insure it's OK, if I find info on pin connections and in/out matching to the analyzer's 50+j0 ohms. I gather this is the one you _don't_ need, but perhaps someone else does. (Looks like probably pins 1&2, and 6&7, are the in/out...9 pin miniature tube base.)

Cheers,
Tom

Just purchased a new Yaesu FTdx-5000D HF rig.  Compared to my previous rig (IC775DSP) this monster has a very rich set of menu items.

Does anyone know of an application to groom this radio (manipulate menu settings, fill memory slots, etc).  Reply direct, as I don't get on USENET much.

Tri-band mobile with 2 bands installed: 2M and 70 cm. Module can be added to open slot for 10M, 6M, 1.25M or 23cm (I have seen quite a few of these band modules on eBay). FM only! Everything works on this radio. 2M PA module is newly replaced and about 15 minutes of use on it! 70cm PA is original, but has very limited use on it. Comes with DTMF mic, power cord and mobile mounting bracket. I can send manual, service manual and schematics on CD if desired. Pic available on request. Please email me direct at acepilot at bloomer dot net. Asking $350 plus $25 for shipping/insurance to USA. Excess shipping will be returned.

Hi,

I have a big self supporting tower in the yard, it is grounded by grounding rods and of course itself. I am attaching two satelite dishes to the tower. The most practical way is using 2x4 wood, this will work great just screwing them to the wood and it will squeeze itself to the brackets and support nicely. I am wondering about the connection to the tower because there will not be grounded to the tower. There wont be any connection (metal to metal) form the satelite dish and the tower, that leads me to believe that the only grounding would be the shielded cable which gets grounded to the nice new 50" plazma.

My question is should i ground that? Should the satelite dish itself be grounded to the tower? Is there any reason for this? Safety wise or interference wise? It would be very simple to do, but not sure if I should or want to. Please give me advice as to either ground the dish to tower or not to. Does anyone think there will be issues? Should I or shouldn't I?

Thanks for any advice.

Transmits fine, all of a sudden all I receive is static, even on local commercial AM stations?

Squelch is Full open = Coax is hooked up

Antenna is A3S/A743 Cushcraft Beam = 10-15-20-40 meters.

I aught to hear something other than static.

Any ideas - TIA

The attachments are of a vintage vacuum tube in its original shipping container. There is no date on the container. I left it this way in its original condition to protect the tube and history as well. The tube says "Federal Tel and Radio F 212E Made in USA". I have no way of testing this but knowing the source I am sure its good. This guy was very meticulous and I practically have original receipts with almost everything. I bought a big lot and will be selling a large amount of vintage tubes on EBAY. I can find info and values on almost all of them except for this one. I want to sell this one as well. If anyone can help me please it would be most appreciated. With what I have learned lately this tube is probably rare. This is my job now and thus my only source of income so please help. OK THE PICS ARE TOO BIG. Feel free to email me with inquiries.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team has decided to consider amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. We are currently trying this on a temporary basis (90 days, through early July 2009), and adopt it permanently if successful.

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

Meanwhile check the RF gain control, and filter switch.

Could perhaps be any of a number of things, from a blown receiver front-end (lightning or electrostatic damage?), a loose connection, defective or loose IF filter, or any of a number of mis-adjustments in the control setting.

The first thing I'd try, with that radio, is a microprocessor reset of the "Reset everything but the memory channels" variety.  Turn the radio power off, hold down A/B, turn the power on, wait a few seconds, release A/B.  This should reset the radio to its default operating modes... if you'd accidentally switched some weird setting into some oddball mode, this should reset it.

If you're still stuck in a "Can transmit but cannot receive" mode, it'd then probably be time for some signal-tracing inside the radio.

I ran across the YOUTUBE entry which shows the effects of connecting the above on signal amplification and have been searching to get one for some time. I use a Grundig Satellit 800 connected to a 60" long wire with a WR LWA-130 adapter between the wire and the receiver.

The performance of the UNICOM Shortwave Antenna Amplifier really impresses me and I would like to get one. Does anyone know where I can find one.

After the prior post mentioning SDR radios, and me seeing how they work withe the web radios, I am now intrigued by the concept. There are several DIY and assembled brands used, with SoftRock being among the best price. However, SoftRock does not appear to be available at this time and several other brands may be "retired" as well.

What would be recommended? I don't want to spend a fortune, but still want decent quality, preferably covering the HF bands. SSB, AM, FM. I see a brand called Elektor SDR offering assembled kits under $150 US. However, some people have problems with setup and a weak receiver. Now they have a preamp for another $75 or so.

Appreciate any thoughts on the subject.

Thanks,
Ted Ham

The rec.radio.info newsgroup, first established in 1993, has been recently revived by an active moderation team. We are currently seeking suitable information, FAQ, and bulletin articles from the entire rec.radio.* newsgroup hierarchy for simultaneous cross-posting to our newsgroup.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

My suggestion would be to purchase a new one - there has been a lot of technological advances since that design was last made some 35 years ago.

Maybe you can do a internet search - I heard that Heathkit was getting back into the ham radio business. Maybe you can find a reproduction.

You didn't mention the amp in your original posting. Hard to diagnose things accurately, at a distance, when one doesn't have a full picture of the setup in question.

Sounds as if the amp's transmit-switchover relays are bad, or are being improperly keyed by the radio. The amp's supposed to leave the antenna connected directly to the transceiver, except when you key up the transceiver.

You'll want to check the relay's signal continuity (and be VERY VERY CAREFUL about how you do this... an amp of this sort has lethal amounts of power present inside it when turned on, and for quite some time after it's turned off!), and also the PTT-keying connection from the transceiver to the amp.

I have a vague recollection that some radios, and some amps, can interact badly, especially if misconfigured (e.g. if the transceiver isn't told it's controlling an external amp or has the wrong transmit delay time setting). If the transceiver starts transmitting before telling the amp to switch over, or with an inadequate amount of delay, the amp's relay may open or close while transmitter power is flowing through it. This can cause the contacts to arc, burn, and possibly even stick.

It's possible you need a replacement relay in the amp, and a setting adjustment on the TS-450 to tell it to increase its TX delay.

I just built and tested a DEMI 2304-144 transverter and it is now for sale. Set up for 9.3W in at 144 MHz and gives 1.00W at 2304. The receive sensitivity is good, with my 2304 MHz signal at -85 dBm giving S8 to S9 on my FT-857 IF radio. Unit is built with common IF in/out, split TX/RX at 2304 and requires a 10 MHz source for the synthesized L.O. Switch is installed for dual frequency operation, but is not wired. By wiring this switch, you can select between 2304 and one other frequency - 2320 or 2424 MHz (NOTE: 2320 is NOT an authorized TX frequency in the USA, but 2424 is). No T/R relay included, but unit is built to work with standard 24V SMA relays. Photos of transverter on the ham radio page at my website below. Unit has been tested at 2304 MHz only.

Price: $495.00. Save yourself 5 bucks and 18 weeks of your life (DEMI's quoted lead time for factory built units). $15 shipping to CONUS, $25 shipping to Alaska or Hawaii. No International shipping, sorry (too much money and too much friggin' paperwork!

Hi, folks.

I have several Icom 745 radios.  I need flat, flexible cable to make up for them.  The maximum conductors are 11 but I can slit more to make 11.  The spacing is .060 x .060.  I have worked with a lot of cables as I am an nnnjineer but never this type of Mylar? cable other than plugging it in or out.

Any suggestions other than asking Icom would be appreciated.

Thank you.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team has decided to consider amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. We are currently trying this on a temporary basis (90 days, through early July 2009), and adopt it permanently if successful.

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. I bought a CAA-500 from a reseller in the USA and have found a problem with the lower frequency input connector, its supposed to be an SO-239.

More on the incompatible thread issue.

I have been in contact with Comet in Japan and they had admitted that the connector will NOT fit the US standard PL-259 connector. They HAVE used the 16mm x 1 mm pitch thread, they call it an International Thread! All PL-259's have a 5/8" x 26 threads per inch pitch.

Here is a copy of the email sent to me regarding the incompatibility of the threads on the lower frequency connector.

Hello Mr. John,
Thank you very much for purchasing our CAA-500.
The CAA-500 first lot does not have international standard connector.
From the second lot, which will be released on NOVEMBER 2011, we change the CAA-500 connector so that PL-259 connector will screw onto the CAA-500 M-J connector completely.
Would you please so kind as to send your CAA-500 back to us?
I will send you the new one with international standard connector, then.
We deeply apologize for the inconvenience we have caused you.
We hope that you will continue to choose COMET products.
Sincerely,
Mika Yagishita

So ALL CAA-500's sold in America WILL have the WRONG thread on the low frequency connector.
Contact your supplier, and I hope you get a better response that I received from the supplier I bought mine from in the USA.
DO not force your PL-259 on the connector, it will damage the thread and render your warranty null and void.

I have relented and spent $70 Aust to send the CAA-500 back to Comet in Japan, along with a sample of a PL-259 so they can check it on the replacement unit before they ship it back to me.

Here is the second email I received from them:

Hello Mr. John,
Thank you for your reply.

Our exchange policy is;
the customer covers the freight fee to COMET, then COMET will offer the new one and cover the freight fee to the customer.
Technically, this is not our mistake because we don't think it's wrong connector.
We usually do not make connector international standard, because we don't feel the need to do that and our distributors purchase our product with this understanding.
From second lot, we decided to make CAA-500 connector international, not because the connector is wrong, but because lots of oversea customers request international standard connector.
We usually exchange the CAA-500 because we think it's true that our product does not satisfy the customer anyway, even not by our mistake.

Please send your CAA-500 to;
Comet Co Ltd

Thank you for your understanding.
Sincerely,
Mika Yagishita

An expensive lesson.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.swap (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/swap-guide/):

I probably would have just opened up the box and put in an SO-239 jack.

Well I thought of that too, was going to use a Type N as a replacement, but decided against that line of action.

Make an adaptor? I am a fitter and machinist, and so had the appropriate thread turning gear including a lathe, but an adaptor would be a very clumsy way around the problem and thinking about it and figured that it may interfere with the calibration, and once I opened the box, warranty is non existent.

I also figured that if I sat on the information, many of you would not be aware that there is a problem with the thread sizes.

Need to move this to finance a new project. Set up for 10W in at 144 MHz. Output 1W at 2304 MHz. Works perfectly. My 2304 weak signal source at -85 dBm gives S9 on my I.F. radio. $495 and free shipping to USA only, no International. You can see it along with more details at http://corbenflyer.tripod.com/ on my ham radio page there and it has my email contact info.

Thank you for being considerate and passing the the info along.

I confess to taking the easy way out most of the time so I automatically think of some kind of hack to manage a workaround.

I have used a a short length of copper tubing and a slightly longer piece of 1/8" wire or brass tube to adapt worn out PL259's to quick service. Slit the tube a little and squeeze it for fit. Sometimes use a stainless hose clamp. Not a "fix" but a workaround for the moment.

Once upon a time a trustworthy manufacturer put out a bunch of PL259 male connectors with out of spec threads. In my case, the antenna connectors sufferred the most.

Your way is of course, the best way for the future use.

I got this transmitter at an auction, and want to see if I can re-build it for ham radio use.
Does anyone have a manual?
Or, can anyone tell me anything about it? Tubes it uses? etc.?
Thanks all,
Stan

Thanks for your encouraging reply John, I have since found out that the Japanese call the PL-259 an "M" connector, and the metric version which I believe is used universally in Japan is called the "M-J" connector. Presumably the "J" for Japan.

I think about 10 or so years ago MFJ put out a lot of equipment, especially their tuners that had the wrong for America threads on the SO-239s.

One would think that the companies would have corrected that by now.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team has decided to consider amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. We are currently trying this on a temporary basis (90 days, through early July 2009), and adopt it permanently if successful.

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

I remember there were once some hams using old Western Union Desk-Fax machines.

Here's a message received by one of my friends.

Hello,
My name is Montgomery Pollack, I own a motion picture prop house in Los Angeles, CA. I am on the hunt for a 1970’s working Telefax machine for a film we are working on right now. Do you have such an item or do you know where I can locate such an item.

Any information would be helpful.
Thank you so much for your time.

Hi;
I'm a newbie with a question please;

On small personal am/fm walkman type radios, most volume controls are a wheel imbedded into the top or side that I take it is attacked to plates inside the radio.
My question concerns this wheel.
No matter how much I spend on these radios after a while they all become static loaded as volume is changed with the wheel.
I take it this is dirt and dust collecting between the plates. I've tried blowing air along the sides of the wheels to clear the plates. I haven't tried any sprays as yet.
Is this a well known issue with these volume wheels and if so is there anything at all that will work to clean these wheels?
Blowing on them is iffy as they are very tight on the radio and not much room on the sides for the air to get inside and do the job.
Can someone in the know advise on this problem please, and thank you very much for your time in answering what to many here must be a very basic question :-))
Dudley Henriques

Determine the requirements and start plugging in assorted generic transistors. You'll get lucky quick. What does it do? Switch? Small signal amp? FET RF Amp?

Yes, most likely dirt, although it may also be worn out. TV tuner cleaning spray can be tried. It comes in a spray can and usually has a plastic "straw" that attaches to the spray head so you can direct it into any small opening in the potentiometer (the volume control). Spray a bit in there and rotate the volume knob several times over the full range of the control.

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team has decided to consider amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. We are currently trying this on a temporary basis (90 days, through early July 2009), and adopt it permanently if successful.

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

radio/personal-intro
Subject: Guide to the rec.radio Newsgroups
Maintainer: jeffreyh@Hawaii.Edu (Jeffrey Herman)
Last Posted: 9 Nov 2001 06:18:17 GMT
Posting-Frequency: 15th of each month

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

rec.radio.amateur.antenna |
rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors |
rec.radio.amateur.dx |
rec.radio.amateur.equipment |
rec.radio.amateur.homebrew |
rec.radio.amateur.moderated |
rec.radio.amateur.space |

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

For more information about our newsgroup, see:

http://www.panix.com/~rram/usenet/rri/index.html

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-info-request@panix.com.

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article       |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since      |

It is supposed to be PL-2303, but it doesn't work with the PL-2303 Prolific Download Drivers, but works with provided driver that is labeled PL-2303 in Windows 98/XP.

I am a recovering Windows victim. I have "hit or miss" results with that dongle on Linux. I am using an ancient Belden Palm Pilot Dock Adapter USB-to-serial, but the LEDs on it make radio noise. Not enough to disrupt comms, but it's there and it bugs me.

"General coverage receiver" is the magical keywords you're looking for. Yes, they do exist. The Kenwood TH-F7E is one that comes to mind, able to do 100kHz (with suitable antenna plugged in) right up to 1300MHz receiving AM and FM. It was able to do SSB and CW up to about 450MHz, and WFM down to about 40MHz. I think Icom have a handheld with similar capabilities. The Yaesu VX-7R can do likewise, but only AM, FM and NFM, not SSB or CW.

These can all transmit on 2m/70cm, and the VX-7R can transmit/receive 6m as well. VX-8R I believe does AM transmit in addition too.

Changes followed by "|".

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team has decided to consider amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. We are currently trying this on a temporary basis (90 days, through early July 2009), and adopt it permanently if successful.

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

We are seeking a replacement maintainer for the following information bulletin formerly posted to rec.radio.amateur.* (and currently archived at http://www.faqs.org/faqs/radio/personal-intro/):

 radio/personal-intro

Subject: Guide to the rec.radio Newsgroups
Maintainer: jeffreyh@Hawaii.Edu (Jeffrey Herman)

Posting-Frequency: 15th of each month

One significant omission, requiring immediate updates, for this article |
is that it does not mention newer amateur radio newsgroups created since |
it was written, including: |

rec.radio.amateur.antenna |
rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors |
rec.radio.amateur.dx |
rec.radio.amateur.equipment |
rec.radio.amateur.homebrew |
rec.radio.amateur.moderated |
rec.radio.amateur.space |

We are willing to provide any technical support necessary to get this article updated and automatically posted again at a regular interval. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainer for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek a new, dedicated maintainer at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original article ourselves.

For more information about our newsgroup, see:

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-info-request@panix.com.

What wouldn't be legal about this (unless it's "hot"), at least in the Well, I'll be sure to keep my "freedom celebrations" to a dull roar to avoid attracting attention.  ;)

After a 30-day public discussion and feedback period to gauge reader opinions in March of 2009:

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.moderated/browse_thread/thread/d7d337db35f23326

the rec.radio.amateur.moderated Moderation Team has decided to consider amending its charter, and permit limited simultaneous crossposting to rec.radio.amateur.moderated and one other unmoderated amateur-radio-related discussion newsgroup. We are currently trying this on a temporary basis (90 days, through early July 2009), and adopt it permanently if successful.

Approved rec.radio.amateur.* newsgroups are those that are currently listed in the latest version of the "List of Big Eight Newsgroups" which is crossposted monthly to news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and news.lists.misc.

Approved alt.radio.amateur.* and alt.ham-radio.* newsgroups are those that have been created consistent with the suggestions in "So You Want to Create an Alt Newsgroup" at:

  http://www.faqs.org/faqs/alt-creation-guide/

Approved regional hierarchy newsgroups are those that contain either "radio.amateur" or "ham-radio" in their names, including uk.radio.amateur and aus.radio.amateur.misc.

We will make every reasonable effort to keep our list of approved newsgroups up-to-date. In case we have overlooked any, and a submission is rejected in error as a result, the rejected submitter can E-mail us at our administrative contact address (in the signature at the bottom of this article, and the default Reply-To for the rejection message) requesting that it be added, and that the article be approved. We may still choose to reject articles crossposted to any alt.* newsgroup with an inappropriate name, including obscene language, embedded name-calling, or encouragement of unlawful conduct.

Please direct any comments, questions, or criticisms to rec-radio-amateur-moderated-request@panix.com.

That link did not work...but really, the exact float voltage is not that critical...the free gassing point of a lead acid battery is 2.37 volts

to float the battery you must stay reasonably below the gassing point or there will be considerable water consumption...hydrogen and oxygen production and heating.

OTOH: the nominal open circuit voltage of a fully charged lead acid battery is 2.12 volts / cell or 12.7v for a 6 cell battery....

so anywhere from 13.1 - 13.8 volts would work for "floating".

Back in the old days when I started in the industry, the settings on the chargers could drift a bit...so we'd try to keep everything in the middle of the accepted range or about 13.5 volts

If the battery is going to be on float for an extended period of time... though the water consumption is minimal...it still needs to be checked periodically and topped off as needed (never fill a battery up into the "neck" area...the water level should be a bit below it)

Finally...a few times a year the battery should be equalize charged to avoid the possibility of sulfation. Usually 6 hours will suffice.
The battery should be brought up to 14.2 volts and allowed to rise to approx 15 volts depending on the type of charger

The link worked for me just now -- at least when I added the http://

The "Super PwrGate" claims to take care of all phases except equalizing
-- but only for Gel-Cell and AGM batteries. "No Spam" says that the Iota/IQ system even does regular (weekly!) equalization charges.

I was hoping to find or build something cheaper that could serve as a controller to make use of one of the power supplies I own already as the power source.

I'd give one of your power supplies a try and see if it gives you an acceptable float voltage...

If not, then one of the commercial ones would probably be a lot easier than trying to build one yourself

Hey ole timer:

First and formost this is a homebrew group.
To suggest to not build and to buy a commercial of the shelf reay to use product, is like those sex ads that get posted here, they both have nothing to do with homebrew.

Lastly I built a flooded lead acid charger. I only bought one part the IC UC3906, I already had a solderless breadboard, the resistors and capacitors in my junk drawer
The hardest part was figuring the resistor values and how to make those values, and that was easy.
The heatsink fan came from an old CPU fan heatsink, and I mounted the pass transistor to that heatsink fan.
I think that the UC3906 was the best think since sliced bread

I guess it's my (the OP) fault: I cross-posted my original question -- asking about off-the-shelf or homebrew solutions -- to both r.r.a.equipment and r.r.a.homebrew, and all the responses have gone to both.

I'll check that out.

I've seen schematics and board layouts for SLA chargers based on the UC3906. VK3EM's uses SMT components, while N5BIA's uses discrete components -- but both are only for charging currents of 2A or so.

For what current did you build yours? If high-current, what pass transistor(s) did you use?

N5BIA offers a kit, and I was wondering whether this could be beefed up to handle 25A by adding 12ga wire to all the charging-current traces and substituting higher-current pass transistor(s). I'd have to recalculate the resistor values to suit a flooded battery, of course. And what about using a P-channel MOSFET device, such as the STP80PF55 that the "Micro M+" uses?

The thing about a low-Rds-on MOSFET, or a low-Vce-sat PNP, is that it really only gains you a benefit under one circumstance: when it's "hard on", acting as much as possible like a short-circuit. This will happen only during the "bulk" fast-charge stage... and only if the charge controller "sees" that the raw (unregulated) power supply circuit isn't capable of pushing more amps into the battery than the design allows.

If the charge control circuit finds it necessary to reduce _either_ the charge amperage, or the voltage being delivered to the battery, in order to charge the battery safely, then the pass transistor will be "partially off". There will be a significant voltage across it (roughly speaking, Vsupply - Vbattery) and lots of amperage, and so it will be dissipating a lot of energy as heat.

At that point, the actual Rds-on of a MOSFET, or the Vce-sat of a PNP, will matter not at all. You'll have to dissipate (Vsupply-Vbat)*Icharge watts of heat in the transistor.

Now, if you happen to have been careful (or lucky) enough in the design of your "raw" power supply, things will look good. By "careful or lucky", I mean that you've put together a raw supply which just happens to run out of "oomph" at exactly the right moment... the effort of delivering 25A into the battery just happens to cause the supply to sag down to the right voltage (equal to a voltage in the range you want to be charging at). Under those conditions, the whole system will be running "flat out", the pass transistor will be turned on as hard as it can be, and heat dissipation in the transistor will be minimized by using a low-voltage-drop transistor of some sort.

However, this approach has pitfalls... it will be finicky to get right (component selection will be difficult) and it will probably be very sensitive to variations in the AC power-line voltage. In real life, you'd find that much of the time, either you aren't getting the full 25A of charge current (line voltage too low), or the voltage and/or current are potentially too high and the charger is having to back off turn down the pass transistor (at which point there's no longer an advantage to a low-voltage-drop transistor).

If you want to deliver a high charging current, with good control and low losses, under a fairly wide range of conditions, I think you'd probably want to use a different approach... use a buck-mode switching regulator rather than a linear pass-transistor system. With that approach, the pass element would almost always be fully-on or fully-off, and thus there'd be a real benefit to a low-resistance MOSFET or a low-saturation power bipolar part.

Of course. His kit includes only the PC board and the PCB-mounted components anyway, so I would have to provide my own enclosure and heat sink (well, maybe it does include a clip-on heat sink; I don't recall).

My idea of using a MOSFET was to avoid the voltage drop of a junction transistor so that it could be fed from a regular P/S that has been cranked up only a little -- as with the "Super PwrGate," which has a voltage drop of no more than 0.5V; any idea what West Mountain Radio uses to accomplish that? So Vsupply - Vbattery would be low, and also the power dissipation.

I'm trying to avoid switching-type circuitry, since I already have RFI-quiet regulated power supplies that are capable of supplying the desired maximum voltage and current. It's just a matter of reducing the voltage at the appropriate stages of the charging/maintenance process.

I was looking at the Super PwrGate until WMR's tech guy pointed out that the absorption voltage is too low and the float voltage possibly too high for flooded batteries. If I knew that it used a UC3906 and did not use SMT components I might be willing to try modifying one, but I don't have that information.

I am not sure if this is the best thread for the question but here we go.

Recently I just revamped my scanner listening area and antenna system and I also set things up to now include my shortwave listening. I have an Icom IC-R71a that I bought to replace some none functional radios I had in the past but really only put around 50hrs on it before putting it in storage around 1990. I recently pulled it out of storage and found out it no longer works well. It now has very low audio and barely can hear any broadcast with it. It tunes to stations but almost no volume.

After lots of research and Q&A, It looks like this like new looking radio will cost more to fix then it is worth and I can not even find a service guy to even look at it to find out if it is worth fixing.

Does anyone have any idea who in California and better yet the Los Angles area around Palmdale that could look at it?

I also am considering a new replacement and since I have been out of listening or using SW equipment for a while, I was wondering what is good now days for a replacement radio under $1000 dollars.

Looking for some good input and thanks......

> "Perce"

There is no design on the internet for charging a flooded lead acid battery at the levels I use. There is a reason for this it's called lithium ion cells.

I used to make a living selling NTE parts. NTE always bought the cream of the JAN type transistors, so they could sub tonnes of transistors with one number. When the regulator went south on my car alternator I used a NTE180 to drive the field winding with a zener regulator I mounted the heat sink right to the positive side of the battery; when that car died the day the big tsunami hit back on boxer day 2005 I took the NTE180 out.

I use an NTE180 30 amp PNP transistor and 1 foot of 14 gauge wire to set up the main charge current, I use a 23amp PS from the filtered unregulated side to the input of the 14 gauge wire to collector of the PNP. the UC3906 looks at the voltage across the 14ga. wire and directly drives the PNP. I snake the wires for the emitter and base of the PNP thru the heatsink fins. I used the TI data sheet for the UC3906 to calculate the settings for the different charge cycles.

The 14 ga wire and the pass transistor are the only off the solderless board parts
I wound the 14 ga wire in a pancake style coil so it fits right over the heat sink

I had to use single turn trim pots and series resistors to set the different charge cycles from the equations provided by the data sheet on the UC3906

I did alot of research on my power supply, the others that used a UC3906 on the internet could not be used to recalculate the resistor values for the UC3906 for a large flooded lead acid battery. There were to many mistakes as I found out.
Using the TI data sheet, is the best way to go, it looks like rocket science but it's easy.\\

"Scrubs"'Scrubs DVD' (http://tinyurl.com/4hm7was), the popular medical comedy series, which was a staple on the NBC television network since 2001, but chose not to renew the show and drawing the ire of devoted fans. Fortunately, the series was immediately picked up by ABC for its eighth season.long-term sitcom was created by Bill Lawrence'Your baby can read DVD' (http://tinyurl.com/65mp5qv) ("Spin City", "Clone High" and "Cougar Town") and the medical comedy series that takes place in Sacred Heart Hospital and focuses on the life of Dr. John JD Dorian (Zach Braff, "Garden State", "The Last Kiss"). JD is an imaginative 'The tribe DVD' (http://tinyurl.com/4mjup6e)mind, so often you see things through his perspective and what he says about himself internally. He works on his girlfriend-and-off again, Dr. Elliot Reed (Sarah Chalke "Clone High," "Roseanne" and "Nothing Too Good For A Cowboy"), which is the same'zumba fitness DVD' (http://tinyurl.com/5tyfy4y) sense of humor as him, his best friend, Dr. Christopher Turk (Donald Faison, "Boondocks," "Robot Chicken") and Turk's wife is a nurse, Carla Espinosa (Judy Reyes, "Third Watch," "The Passion"). And in the workplace, JD has put up with'Prison break DVD' (http://tinyurl.com/48xurkv) Dr. Perry Cox ("Any Given Sunday," "Stealing Harvard", "office rats"), which seems unusual as he and guardian (Neil Flynn, "Middle", " Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull ").

Dale-

I suspect your IC-R71a is well worth the cost of repair. The problem could be something very simple, like a dirty contact in an external speaker or headset jack. Try plugging in a speaker or headset into it a few times, and see if that clears up the problem.

Check out Eham for reviews of various repair centers, <http://www.eham.net/reviews/products/26>.

One with a good reputation for Icom is Scott Malcom in Toledo, Washington. His website is <http://www.angelfire.com/biz2/mts>.

I don't know of a specific repair center near Los Angeles. There are Ham Radio Outlet stores in Anaheim, Burbank, San Diego, Sunnyvale and Oakland. <http://www.hamradio.com/> I don't think they do repairs, but perhaps they would refer you to a reliable repair center if you called the closest one.

do thank you for getting back to me but according to the responses from radio reference is that the radio would need to go through a complete re-cap due to the age of the radio as well as a new ram battery replacement. By the time all the money was invested in it, it would cost $200 to $300 hundred which is about what the radio is worth. I am still weighing my options but for $600 to $700 i would be able to buy a better radio that still is supported, I have not been able to find a guy that would even look at the R71 and this is discouraging....

I will look at some of your recommendation as well but at this time $100 to maybe $200 is all I can justify for this radio that has in the past been criticized for poor audio to begin with....

Dale-

Re-capping applies to antique radios. Since about the 1960s, capacitors have been made using dielectrics that hold up much better over time. That doesn't mean a capacitor isn't bad, but you would NOT want to replace them all. Such a cure could be worse than the disease!

According to RigPix.com, the Icom IC-R71a was manufactured in the 1984 timeframe. Radios of that vintage may have developed dirty contacts in their controls and switches, and the RAM battery is quite old. If yours has the original battery, it is probably time to replace it, but total repair cost should not be as high as you are thinking. At least not with a reputable service center.

The problem you describe does not sound serious to me. I think you would be able to sell the radio on eBay for a fair price, even on a "parts or repair" basis.

I would look at a new Icom or Kenwood receiver as a replacement, but I'm not up-to-date on shortwave receivers. Perhaps someone in the rec.radio.shortwave newsgroup would be better able to recommend a replacement. However that group seems to be overrun with nonsense and spam, so I can understand why you might come here instead!

There is a hidden "gotcha" in the ICOM R-70, R-71 and R-71a, and several tranceivers of the era.

Instead of a ROM chip holding the operating software, it was placed in battery backed-up RAM. The idea being that it would be easy to upgrade the radio at almost no cost.

It turned out to be a bad idea and left many of those radios "brain dead" when the battery died and the programing was lost.

Someone used to sell a replacement ROM chip board that would go in instead of the RAM chip board. I have no idea if they still do.

So not only would the radio need a new battery, it would need to have the RAM reloaded if the battery has already died, or replacement with a ROM chip.

If the battery is still good, there is a way of replacing it without losing the contents of the RAM.

In defense of ICOM for something that seems insane by modern standards, the battery lasted for almost 25 years. It may be planned obsolesence, but they were awfully patient. :-)

Great call there Geoff. I believe there is a group for this receiver on Yahoo. Or maybe an Icom group, where he could get this fixed/ up to date. It was an above average radio in it's day, and I hate to see a receiver die. Lots of Ham and techs who fix radios just for fun.
